TOO MANY CAMPERS—Everyone seemed to have the same idea this Fourth of July weekend at Samuel Taylor State Park. Cars of campers were lined up like a highway traffic jam early this morning. But rangers said there was no room. Several spent last night in their cars. (Independent-Journal photo)

State Traffic Deaths Soaring To Grim Total

Record For 3-Day Holiday

Combined AP and UPI

California highway fatalities mounted today and a Highway Patrol spokesman said the state was headed for an all-time holiday death toll record.

As the 78-hour Fourth of July weekend passed the halfway mark, authorities counted 36 persons killed and many more injured. California again led the nation in highway deaths and, in fact, accounted for some 20 per cent of the total, 180 since 6 p.m. Thursday.

Twenty of the state traffic deaths were reported from Southern California, 14 from the north.

(As of noon today, Marin County had escaped a holiday traffic death.)

The present record for a 78-hour Independence Day weekend is 46 deaths recorded in 1955. A highway patrol spokesman said there was "no question" that that mark would be surpassed if the present trend continues.

Throughout the nation, however, the traffic toll hit a midweekend lull today. Deaths were below the predicted national total. The 161 national total was about 15 per cent below the same period in the worst Independence Day weekend in 1960.

Third Fire Erupts As Marin Deputies Press Arson Hunt

Another large grass fire erupted in Marin yesterday, and County Fire Chief Louis J. Bloom suspects it also was set. Two blazes probably set, blackened 50 acres Thursday.

Thirty acres of grass, brush and trees on Big Rock Ridge south of Novato were burned by a wind whipped blaze that headed for Loma Verde subdivision homes yesterday.

The cause, said Bloom, is still undetermined, but it was definitely "not natural." Fire units were called from Novato, Marin County and Marinwood at 4:38 p.m. The blaze was under control about 8 p.m.

"It could have been a very serious fire," said Bloom. "We couldn't find anything to tie it to a natural cause."

Marin County Sheriff's authorities yesterday questioned a 21-year-old man for several hours in connection with Thursday's grass fires in the Woodacre area. No arrest was made.

Yesterday's fire, burning about 6 miles west of Hamilton Air Force Base, was fanned by 35 to 40 mile per hour winds, said Bloom.

It burned areas on the Luiz Bros. ranch and the former Bodkin ranch property. The blaze was stopped just as it reached a wooded area, near Loma Verde.

Only access to the area, said Bloom, is a fire road, running along the top of the ridge. He estimated that the terrain is some of the county's ruggedest.

Fires Thursday at Tamarancho Boy Scout Camp, west of Fairfax and at Hill Avenue in Woodacre were set deliberately, said Bloom.

The Woodacre fire burned about 25 acres of grass and bushes. Four juveniles were questioned in connection with the scout camp fire, but they were not held.

"We've got a firebug loose at the worst possible time of the year," said Bloom, referring to the scarcity of rain.

Some Fuss, But Racial Lines Fade

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Racial barriers fell in a number of cities in southern and border states yesterday in compliance with the civil rights law but not without incidents.

In Atlanta, an outspoken segregationist restaurant owner threatened three Negro ministers with a pistol and his companions beat on their automobile with ax handles.

The restaurant owner is Lester Maddox, an outspoken segregationist who once ran unsuccessfully for lieutenant governor of Georgia. He was flanked by a crowd of whites armed with ax handles.

"God bless you, Lester," cried a white woman, one of about 250 persons gathered at the restaurant to watch the civil rights test.

At Cambridge, Md., the proprietor of a diner struck a Negro with his fist. He was charged with assault and battery.

In other racial developments, three out-of-state congressmen flew to Mississippi to learn first hand of conditions in the "Mississippi project" a civil rights campaign which has attracted hundreds of white "summer volunteers" from campuses across the nation.

A search continued at Philadelphia, Miss., without apparent results for three civil rights workers missing since June 21.

Here is how the first day after passage of the civil rights bill was greeted across the country:

Atlanta — Three Negro youths who walked into a crowd at a states rights rally were beaten and pummelled with chairs by white spectators.

Birmingham, Ala. — Negroes were served without incident in nine restaurants and admitted to four movie theaters in this once racially tense city.

Montgomery, Ala. — Negroes were served in at least three eating establishments and were admitted to one downtown theater. There were no incidents.

Nashville, Tenn. — Two local segregated cafeterias, scenes of racial disorder and scores of arrests last spring, desegregated quietly.

Danville, Va.—Four Negroes lunched without incident at a previously segregated restaurant and four others dropped in at a previously all-white theater to see "Cleopatra."

Charleston, S.C. — Racial barriers fell quietly at most restaurants, motels and theaters but the Fort Sumpter Hotel denied service to a Negro leader as undesirable while offering to serve his two companions.

New Orleans — Several restaurants served Negroes for the first time yesterday. Mayor Victor Schiro urged acceptance of the new law. A cross was burned outside a Negro Catholic school.

Crowds Brave Gloomy Skies To Visit Fair

Cloudy, chilly weather threatened to cut attendance at the Marin Art and Garden Fair in Ross, but not much. Fair goers were marking the Fourth of July with a visit to the colorful grounds today. Banners above the grounds added color to the grayness overhead.

Paid attendance yesterday was 5,883, slightly above last year's turn-out for the third day.

The fair's entertainment program will close with a performance by the Marin Civic Ballet at 8:45 p.m. tomorrow at the Amphitheater stage.

Members of the group will present Rustic Wedding, choreographed by Marc Wilde to the music of Karl Goldmark. A grande pas de deux from the Don Quixote suit will be performed by guest artists from the Pacific Ballet, Grace Doty and Alan Howard.

As a finale the group will present Les Sylphides choregraphed by Jack Johannes to the music of Chopin with Doty and Howard as soloists.

The Sunday program is: Lesselli puppets, 11 a.m., 2:30 and 6 p.m.; "Poogie-Poogie," the jester, 11:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.; a program of barbershop quartet singing by members of the Marin Chapter, Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, 1 p.m.; organ concerts, by Emory Stevenson, 4:30 and 7:30 p.m.; a handbell concert by the Marin Handbell Ringers, 7 p.m.; and the ballet.

Marin City Woman Injured In Traffic

Bernadine Westmore, 18, of Building C-30, Apt. 233, Marin City, was reported in good condition at Marin General Hospital recovering from injuries she received in an auto accident in San Francisco around 4 a.m. today.

She suffered a fractured nose and multiple contusions of the back.

Sun Takes Holiday, Too; Marin Has Cool Time

Marinites faced a dim Fourth of July today as the sun showed its independence and refused to come out.

An unusually cool 59 degrees was recorded at noon with overcast skies hanging heavy over festivities. The Weather Bureau had predicted a warm day throughout most of Northern California.

Fireworks will give some overhead brightness tonight at Corte Madera, Peacock Gap and Woodacre.

Pyrotechnics will begin at 8:45 p.m. at Neil Cummins School ground in Corte Madera and 9:15 at the Peacock Gap Golf and Country Club.

San Geronimo Valley merchants will provide a bomb-bursting show at 9 p.m. at Woodacre Improvement Club.

Some impromptu fireworks were already staged by some, forgetting the strict warning of fire departments that fireworks without licensed supervision are illegal.

A seven-acre grass fire at 2:43 p.m. yesterday in Sleepy Hollow, burning property adjacent to 90 Garden Rock Road, was attributed to fireworks by San Anselmo Fire Department.

Nearby residents told authorities they heard firecrackers, and other flares immediately prior to the blaze. Marin County fire units were called to assist.

At 3:10 p.m. yesterday in Novato, a fire consuming grass and grape vines opposite 2081 Center Road was caused by children playing with firecrackers. Some three-fourths of an acre of grass burned.

Refugees Robbed

MIAMI (UPI) — Three Cuban refugees were gunned down by a fusilade of pistol bullets and robbed of more than $6,000 today as they left the supermarket which they opened as partners yesterday. Two of the men in critical condition, one of them with at least seven 45-caliber bullet wounds, according to police. A third was listed as serious.

Vietnam Defeat

SAIGON, Vietnam (UPI) — Communist guerrillas overran a special forces camp in the jungled mountains of Kontum Province today, slaughtering 50 government defenders and wounding at least 27 others including two Americans. The attack was a virtual carbon copy of a similar attack agaist the same camp last year. In this raid, the Reds also captured a rich haul of weapons and ammunition.

Rabid Skunk In San Rafael; 13th In Marin

San Rafael's first rabid skunk was killed last weekend, bringing the county's total of rabies infested polecats to 13 this year.

Dr. Carolyn Albrecht, county health officer, reported today that tests on the animal, shot by San Rafael police in the 200-block of Locust Avenue last Sunday, showed it was rabid.

She said several skunks had been seen in the area recently. She warned residents to stay away from any peculiar-acting animals.

This tops the worst previous rabies endemic year of 1955, when 11 rabid skunks were reported, Dr. Albrecht said.

Young Prowler Threatens Girl With Stabbing

The Marin County Sheriff's Office today sought a brown-haired man in his late 20s who attempted to molest a 14-year-old girl at the Tamalpais Valley home where she was visiting at about 3 a.m. today.

Deputies said the girl, who had been staying for several days, was sleeping on the top part of a bunk bed in a bedroom.

She said she awoke to find a man standing next to the bed.

"Be quiet," she quoted him as saying. "I have a knife and I'll kill you. I've killed before."

The girl also said the man threatened to kill her brother, who was also staying at the home.

After about 20 minutes, the man left by the front door and was heard to walk down the street.

He was described as being about five-feet ten-inches tall, medium build, with fair complexion and short brown hair. He was wearing a short-sleeved white shirt.

Traffic Checks Trap Only One Tipsy Driver

SUNNYVALE (UPI) — Police of Oakland, Berkeley and Pittsburg made a traffic check of 7,664 vehicles early today and stopped 777 of them.

Headquarters here said that one drunk driver was arrested and eight others with alcohol on their breaths drew warnings.

Eighty-four drivers were cited for improper lights, 24 for other mechanical defects.

Coast Guard Plane Missing In Alaska

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A Coast Guard amphibian today was reported overdue on a flight from the Annette Island Coast Guard Station near Ketchikan, Alaska.

The Coast Guard here said it was not known how many men were aboard the twin-engine HU-16E.

CORE Again Visits Bank In Sausalito

About 25 Congress on Racial Equality pickets marched and sang outside the Sausalito Branch of the Bank of America from 4:30 to 6 p.m. yesterday.

The placard-carrying pickets, including several small children, caused little disturbance, Sausalito police reported.

Bank branches in San Mateo, Oakland and San Francisco were also visited by the CORE members yesterday afternoon. In San Francisco, nearly 100 gathered at the Powell-Market branch at 4 p.m. where they marched for half an hour before separating into two groups which walked to two nearby branches where "bank-in" and "walk-in" were staged with no incident.

CORE and the Bank of America have reached no agreement during talks on the bank's hiring and promotional policies.

Novato Mother Donates Kidney To Ailing Woman

A Novato mother has given one of her kidneys in hope that another mother's life will be saved.

Mrs. Jean Gomes arranged the operation for removal of her kidney without telling her husband, James, although he knew she was considering it. She entered University of California Hospital in San Francisco on Monday — "for tests," she told her husband. The next day, one of her kidneys was transplanted to Mrs. Teresa Garcia of San Francisco, both of whose kidneys had been removed.

Neighbors of the Garcia home at 1049 Eight Street, who had been "let in on" the secret, waited nervously for word that Mrs. Garcia had survived the surgery without mishap. When they learned she had, they told her husband.

He was surprised, but not upset.

"Jean believes in helping other people — even to the extent of giving up part of herself," he said.

Mrs. Garcia, wife of a clerk, has three children. There are four children, the youngest 10 months, in the family of Gomes, a wine salesman.

Once before, Mrs. Gomes had offered to give one of her kidneys. She read of a Chinese girl in Sacramento who required a kidney transplant. She offered to be the donor — and was selected, from about 100 volunteers. But the girl died before the operation could be performed.

Then, just before the Gomes family went on two-week vacation, she heard about Mrs. Garcia.

"My wife went to see her in the hospital," said Gomes. "She told me, 'They have a family like ours, and those children need a mother.' "

Three days after returning from vacation, Mrs. Gomes entered the hospital for the transplant operation.

Mrs. Linda Megason of 16 Marion Court is caring for the Gomes children until their mother recovers.

Mrs. Gomes is expected to return home Tuesday. And by then, doctors hope to know whether the transplanted kidney will function in the body of Mrs. Garcia.

"I wouldn't have the courage to do what my wife did," marvels Gomes. "And she's afraid of a little bug on the floor!"

Traveling Trio Sought For Thefts From Gas Stations

Marin County law officers today sought a Hollister man whose car, at least, was involved in the theft of tires from two gas stations in the county before dawn today.

First report came from the Shell Station at Third and Irwin Street, San Rafael, where three youths made an unsuccessful attempt to pocket small items from the office, but were caught by an attendant, according to San Rafael police.

The three drove away in a black 1957 Chevrolet two-door sedan. A whitewall tire was discovered missing a short time later.

About two hours later, Novato police said, a similar theft was reported by Wilson's Texaco, 915 Diablo Drive, Novato.

San Rafael police said the car's license was traced to a resident of Hollister, San Benito County. The California Highway Patrol was alerted, as was the Sonoma County Sheriff's Office, since the trio were headed northward.

IN THE PATH OF INFERNO

Photographer ignores nearby explosives-filled shed as he braves searing heat to get picture of out-of-control flames sweeping Angelus National Forest near town of Green Valley yesterday. Flames Spare Small Town But Roar On NEWHALL (UPI) — A gigantic brush fire which was burning out of control today no longer was considered a threat to the retirement community of Green Valley which was spared a major disaster by precautions taken by its 1,000 residents.

The fire had blackened more than 12,000 acres by early today and fire officials said containment of the rampaging blaze was "many, many hours away."

Battling the flames were 800 men, 85 tanker units and eight bulldozers. Firefighters were attempting to slow its progress in the Leona Valley in the Angeles National Forest.

The wind-whipped blaze yesterday swept down Jupiter ridge to the south of Green Valley, 15 miles north of here, and jumped over the village to a ridge on the north.

The fire had no opportunity to get a foothold in the community because residents weeks before had cleared the area around their homes of brush and tall grass when warned of the fire danger.

The three-day-old fire had burned a section 17 miles long and almost two miles wide by last night. It had appeared near containment yesterday but 100-degree heat, combined with near zero humidity and wind gusts, sent flames roaring from one canyon to another.

No help was expected from the weather today as high temperatures and windy conditions were forecast.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Acheson Named Troubleshooter

Acheson

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Lyndon B. Johnson is sending former Secretary of State Dean Acheson to Geneva as U.S. troubleshooter in the Cyprus crisis talks beginning next week.

Informed sources here and at the United Nations say only that Acheson will be "on hand" and will "follow" the new talks aimed at ending the bloody strife between Greek and Turkish Cypriots.

Acheson, who built up great prestige in the Truman Doctrine days in Greece and Turkey, was expected to leave today or Sunday.

Administration officials are described as believing the hot situation is approaching a flash point, with both sides pouring arms into the Mediterranean island, and that negotiations must be hurried before there's an explosion.

Pay TV Files 'Free Speech' Suit

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Supporters of pay television yesterday asked the California Supreme Court to keep from the November ballot an anti-pay television initiative, claiming such a measure violated the constitutional right of free speech and expression.

Kevelin A. Silverman, as a taxpayer, petitioned for a writ of mandate to prevent Secretary of State Frank Jordan from putting the initiative on the ballot. The suit claims Subscription Television, Inc., would lose millions of dollars in contracts, including two with the Los Angeles Dodgers and San Francisco Giants, according to the petition, if the initiative is placed before the voters and acted upon.

Subscription Television plans to start the first West Coast pay television in Los Angeles and San Francisco on July 17.

According to the Silverman suit, those starting the initiative against pay TV were "California Crusade for Free TV" and A. C. Childhouse, vice president and treasurer of United California Theaters.

The legislature in 1963 authorized pay television and this should not be repealed without giving the plan an opportunity to work, according to the petition.

Airline Strike Off

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Negotiators for the Transport Workers Union and American Airlines reached a contract settlement today, averting a holiday strike by 9,000 mechanics. The settlement came in an early morning bargaining session with federal mediators after a midnight strike deadline was extended to permit the talks to continue.

Typhoon Toll Rising

MANILA (UPI) — The unofficial death toll soared to 120 today as relief for thousands of victims of Typhoon Winnie poured out from government and private agencies. The U. S. aid program in the Philippines pitched in by supplying foodstuffs from the surplus agricultural commodities program.

Battle In Laos

TOKYO (UPI) — The Communist radio reported today that the Reds in Laos have killed two and captured six of 32 South Vietnamese soldiers dropped behind their lines and are "encircling" the rest of the force.

Just A Little Hobby

OLD HILL, England (UPI) — Mrs. Irene Jackson said today she bought a $18,200 fishing lake for her husband, nut-and-bolt manufacturer Cecil Jackson, because "he needed something to make him relax a bit."

Berlin Escapees

BERLIN (UPI) — Four young refugees in a stolen East German truck escaped under Communist gunfire early today to the American sector of Berlin. Two young men, and boy, 14 and a girl, 18, drove the truck across a field in a deserted area, rammed it through three barbed wire barriers and then leaped a yard-wide irrigation ditch on the East-West Berlin border.

HARE OF THE DOG?

No, this is a rabbit of the wild outdoors that has become the pet of Janet Turpin of Brush Prairie, Wash. She and the rabbit have become such good friends that they even share the same ice cream cone. It's a fine arrangement, especially in hot weather. (AP Wirephoto)

Here Are Answers To Civil Rights Questions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Here in question-and-answer form is an explanation of how the new civil rights law applies to various businesses:

Q. What parts of the law have a direct effect on business establishments?

A. Two parts, one banning discrimination in places of public accommodation and the other in hiring, firing and other employment practices.

Q. What is meant by places of public accommodation?

A. Establishments offering food, lodging and entertainment to the public.

Q. What about tourist homes?

A. If a tourist home or a rooming house is occupied by the owner as his residence and not more than five rooms are for rent, it is exempt from coverage.

Q. Does the ban on discrimination apply to gasoline stations?

A. Yes.

Q. What about a department store?

A. A department store is not specifically covered, but if it has any covered establishment within its premises, it is — for example, if it has a restaurant or a lunch counter.

Q. Does this work the other way around so that a shop in a covered establishment is brought under the law?

A. Yes, beauty shops and barber shops are not specifically covered, for example, but they are if they are in a hotel.

Q. What kind of discrimination is prohibited?

A. The law provides that all persons shall be entitled to the full and equal enjoyment of the goods, services, facilities, privileges and advantages in places of public accommodation "without discrimination or segregation on the ground of race, color, religion, or national origin."

Q. When did this become effective?

A. Thursday night, when President Johnson signed the measure into law.

Q. Are there any criminal penalties for violating it?

A. No. Enforcement is through injunction suits brought in federal courts by individuals or, if a pattern or practice of discrimination is alleged, by the U.S. attorney general.

Q. What if a court order barring discrimination is not obeyed?

A. A judge, using his civil contempt powers, could put a person in jail until he agreed to obey the court order. But if a judge wanted to punish a person for a past violation through criminal contempt proceedings, there would have to be a jury trial.

Q. What about the ban on discrimination in employment? When does it become effective?

A. A year from now.

Q. What businesses will it apply to?

A. Businesses with 100 or more employees are covered in the first year after it becomes effective, those with 75 or more in the second, those with 50 or more in the third, and those with 25 or more thereafter.

Q. What about seasonal employees? How are they counted?

A. Employees are counted for coverage purposes only if they worked at least 20 weeks for the business in a year.

Q. Does this part of the bill prohibit discrimination on account of sex?

A. Yes, and on account of race, color, religion or national origin.

Q. What about enforcement?

A. No criminal penalties are provided for violations. As in the public accommodations section, suits may be brought by aggrieved individuals or by the attorney general.

In both of these two parts of the bill, provision is made to seek voluntary settlements of complaints and to give states with their own laws in these fields a chance to act before the federal government steps in.

Construction Zone Traps Motorists

Ernest E. Harwig of 1771 Grant Avenue, Apartment 2, Novato, let his roommate, Peter G. Milbury, drive his car when the two went for an ill fated ride early today.

At 1:45 a.m., according to the California Highway Patrol, the pair were travelling north on Highway 101, near the Black Point turnoff, when Milbury lost control and the car turned over.

Both were taken to San Rafael General Hospital, where Harwig, 22, was treated for scrapes and bruises on the first finger of his right sand, and Milbury, 21, was treated for cuts on his nose and scalp.

Milbury was cited for excessive speed, the patrol said. He was estimated to have been travelling from 60 to 65 miles per hour in an area zoned for 45 due to construction.

Harwig's car was a total loss.

Sentimental Day For Goldwater

PRESCOTT, Ariz. (AP) — Sen. Barry Goldwater takes a sentimental trip to this one-time territorial capital today to honor the memory of his uncle Morris and ride at the head of Prescott's historic rodeo parade.

It was in Prescott that Goldwater's grandfather, Michael, opened in 1875 the first of the family's department stores.

Astride an aging Palomino named Sonny, Goldwater was to lead the parade through Prescott to the town's 77th rodeo—one of the oldest in the West.

Window Shattered

Proposed City Offers Central School Plan

By BRUCE COLEMAN

One campus is envisioned for all kindergarten through eighth grade pupils at the proposed new City of Marincello instead of several schools spotted in separate locations.

This idea is being considered, said Henry M. Grant, vice president of the Frouge Corp., developers, builders and engineers, for the planned 25,000 population city to be completed within 10 years. It will be sandwiched between Forts Barry, Baker and Cronkhite near Sausalito.

Grant said that Frouge is providing the land for the kindergarten through eighth grade school or schools in its 2,000 acre development. However, it is not known now where students of high school age will be educated, within the city or without.

Projected in the completed development, he said, are 2,107 kindergarten through eighth grade pupils and 643 students in ninth through 12th grades, or a total of 2,750 pupils. In the lower grade levels single family homes are expected to provide 847 pupils, town house 510 pupils and apartments 750.

It is expected that, in many cases, both man and wife will work and with plans for light industry and offices within the city, it is hoped that at least one of the family will not have to commute out of Marincello to work.

The proposed city is now in the planning stages and there has been no estimated date as to when ground will be broken.

Presentation materials, such as films, slides, maps and charts, being worked upon by Reid and Tarics, San Francisco architects, are expected to be ready for display by this fall.

Marincello is one of 117 cities across the United States now being planned as a complete unit. It will have single family houses, town houses (row houses), garden and elevator apartments, office buildings, research and light industry, parks and recreational areas.

The company plans to subsidize its own low rent housing for people who will be providing services within the city.

Access to Marincello, said Grant, is expected to be over Rodeo Avenue and possibly through Tennessee Valley, the property extending northward that far.

Marincello is in a large bowl which tilts southwest to the ocean with elevations from 10 to 1,100 feet and it includes the upper end of the upper lagoon near Fort Cronkhite.

As a planned community, it is expected to pay into Marin County $2,000,000 more than it costs the county.

The hills are to stay "just as they are," said Grant, and "we will use the cluster development system to fit buildings to the terrain."

This Is Good Day For Birthday, Old Ex-Slave Decides

BARTOW, Fla. (AP) — Charlie Smith will celebrate his birthday today—his 122nd.

He is the oldest man on the Social Security rolls.

He was kidnapped in Liberia at the age of 12, sold as a slave in the United States to a Texas rancher who gave him his name and raised him as a member of the family.

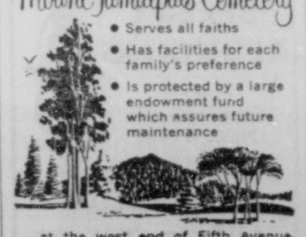

When Charlie regained his freedom 100 years ago, he decided July 4 was a good day to celebrate his birthday, but he doesn't plan anything special for the day.

"I got nothing to do," he said with a toothless grin.

Unruh Seeks State Probe On Gaming

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Assembly Speaker Jesse M. Unruh, stressing the urgency for immediate committee action, has authorized a legislative investigation into the adequacy of state statutes governing gambling and games of chance.

Under study will be a card game of Malayan origin known as Panguingue or "Pan."

Enforcement of local ordinances outlawing games of chance against Panguingue studies has resulted in a legal dispute which is presently pending before the State Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court was petitioned for a writ of habeas corpus following arrests made in Long Beach for violation of the local gambling ordinance.

James T. Starr, Long Beach prosecutor, said "the question to be determined in that case is whether the state has preempted the field of gambling to the exclusion of local governing bodies."

Right-Wing Marchers Discouraged By Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Organizers of the "right-wing unity rally and march on Washington" have scaled down their estimate of participants from as many as 200,000 persons to about 2,000.

Now, the sponsors planned to circulate a petition demanding a repeal of the act.

Evening News: The Short Formal Comes Back In Luxurious Fabric

By GAY PAULEY

NEW YORK, (UPI)—The short formal, overshadowed the last two seasons by long gowns, emerges again for fall and winter evenings.

It's dressier than the conventional cocktail dress, comes in fabrics just as luxurious as those which go into the floor length gowns and cut equally low at the top. Its added advantage: Great maneuverability getting in and out of car or cab.

ADELE SIMPSON, designer-manufacturer, did the short formal in red satin with a flounced hem. Ceil Chapman, designer and boss of her firm, added a flounce to a short formal in tangerine chiffon. Designer manufacturer Sarmi made a short dinner costume in yellow and white cut velvet. White mink bordered the hem of the dress, topped with a seven-eighths length coat.

Louis Estevez showed both long and short formals with a new skirt treatment—free floating panels attached at the waist and worn over an underskirt. The panels, in dark velvets, were lined in the underskirt color, usually a bright or pastel shade.

Gaston Berthelot, designer for Christian Dior-New York, used pale crepes for side-draped, sarong-like short formals and topped their straplessness with rhinestone bib necklaces. One of the sexieth of Dior's short dance dresses started with a form-fitting base in black silk, covered with several layers of wide open net. Its title: "The Gay Divorcee."

THERE'S A RETURN to the strapless top for evening to compete with daringly plunged necklines which have to have strings across the shoulders anyway to hold them up.

And at least two designers introduced "new" formal lengths. Dior and Bill Blass, at Maurice Rentner, showed formals about 12 inches off the floor.

Also coming back, after several seasons of the column-like formals, is the full skirted ballgown with tiny waist. Several designers show the true bouffant in lush fabrics such as satin and warp print.

THESE WERE SOME of the trends for evening to emerge in this week of manufacturer-designer showing for reporters. The current shows, which include some West Coast firms, are sponsored by the American Designer Series. Next week, the shows will continue with the New York Couture Group holding its 43rd semi-annual "Press Week" for the visitors.

Be The Talk Of The Beach—Make Walking Cabana In Hour

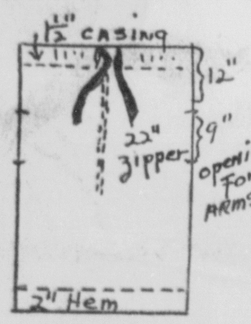

By EUNICE FARMER

If you want to be the talk of the beach, make and wear a walking cabana. This clever and useful item is the first new idea I've seen for a long time. It can be made for an hour's time and the cost of three yards of fabric, readymade it sells for around $15.

1. Cut two strips of fabric about 1½ yards long for each strip. The fabric should be denim, sail cloth, or any firm type cotton about a yard wide.

2. Sew the two long edges together at each side, leaving an opening for your arms 12 inches from the top. The opening should be about 9 inches.

3. Turn under 1½ inch for a casing at the neckline and machine stitch.

4. Insert a 22-inch zipper down the center front, beginning just below the casing.

5. Make a tie by folding the material over to about 1 inch width, 1½ yards long.

6. Pull the tie through the casing tie to fit neckline, finish the hem and you're done.

7. This makes a great gift for anyone who swims because you can change your clothes anywhere and no one is the wiser. Try it!

Tailor Trix winner: "For those of us who still do lots of square dancing, a trick we gals have learned to do to let our bouffant slips retain their fullness. Sew 40-pound test, nylon fish line in the bottom of the slips. Zig-zag over the fish line with a narrow setting on the machine. This works beautifully for little girls' slips too."

I have tried buying millinery-type glue as you suggested for covering the shoes with fabric and no one seems to know just what I mean. Perhaps other readers are having the same problem. Can you tell us where this is available? Mrs. K.B.H.

Dear Mrs. K.B.H.

Sorry, I keep forgetting that unless you live in a large city some of these items might not be available. You may use any of the milky household glues. Before you begin working with your shoes, may I suggest you try the glue on your fabric to be sure it does not spot.

Everytime I make a belt for myself, or have one made, they always come out too tight, even though I use my waist measurement. How do you measure for belts? Mrs. R.R.E.

Dear Mrs. R.R.E.:

Your original waist measurement was probably taken with nothing but your slip on, and the dress you will be wearing will add to the measurement. I would suggest you measure yourself with the dress on, and use that as a guide for the size of the belt.

Certainly you have many questions about sewing. I have a small leaflet which has answers to 20 common questions. To obtain your copy send 25 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Sew Simple in care of the Independent-Journal.

Highlights Of Designer Collections

LUIS ESTEVEZ — Always a neckline conscious designer, Estevez used only a thin covering of chiffon to veil the top of the figure while the dress beneath was deeply cut out. Or, some were halter fronts with nothing but bareness at the back. For at home pajamas, he used the strip-tease- look combination of black lace over nude crepe.

ADELE SIMPSON—She introduced the "animated" skirt, her way of describing suits and dresses with low pleating either at the front or all around. Coat silhouettes were lean with small flat collars. And there was a definite trend to more fit as the waistline moved toward the body on some day dresses. Some were given cummerbund insets of fabric. Her "saucy" skirt was a tunic, lean and unbelted, with a flounce of flat-pressed pleats at the hemline. She showed white, white, white for evening.

HARRY FRECHTEL — This firm cut suits with a closer to the body fit. Released hemlines, eased by pleats, made news through the collection. Suit fabrics included men's wear glen plaid worsted. Coats were narrow and numerous dresses, either in wool or silk, were coat style.

CEIL CHAPMAN—This specialist in sexy evening fashions went all out for the flounced skirt in both short and long formals. A sleeveless black crepe cocktail dress ended in a double tier of ruffled flounce. Necklines plunged both fore and aft and one black crepe had a rhinestone lacing holding it together from the waist up.

Clever New Swimcaps

What will the well-dressed mermaid wear? Among other things, she'll sport a swim cap that looks like a bouquet of seaweed net, highlighted by bands of sequins. Or else she'll wear a hat that looks like straw but is waterproof. Some of the other new swim caps have fringe and ruffles.

Way-out ones have life-like hair.

Easty To Wash Vinyl Curtains In Bathtub

It's easy to wash vinyl curtains, home economists report.

Toss them in the bath tub, add lukewarm water and mild soap flakes—no detergents. Let soak as long as you wish. Empty the tub, add clean lukewarm water, dunk the curtain up and down a few times, and hang right back up on the rod. (UPI)

Heigh-Ho, Come To The Fair But Bring Plenty Of Money

NEW YORK, N. Y. — Will the contents of the wallet last as long as the strength of the legs and the feet?

This is the question that every World's Fair visitor soon faces.

After you have been through it, you know they both give out about the same time, so the question is really unimportant.

Take the matter of getting from midtown Manhattan out to the fair at Flushing Meadows on Long Island.

It sounds simple. With a 15-cent token you can board a subway train at either Grand Central Station or Times Square and whizz out to the fairgrounds just under 20 minutes (unless you have the misfortune to board a local train which stops at every station; then the time is about doubled).

Trouble is, you can wander around either Times Square or Grand Central for biggest part of half an hour, climbing up and downstairs, before you get to the right platform for boarding the fair train. That stair climbing can be tough on the old legs.

And when you get to the fair, it is a hike of a block or two from the train station to the actual entrance to the grounds.

ALL THIS WOULD BE only a good warmup for the legs and feet were it not for that 20-minute subway train ride, hanging on a strap.

The old straps are gone. The new cars have a metal handle which is more tiresome to grasp than the old straps. The new cars pitch, roll, swerve and jerk just like the old ones. It's a rough 20 minutes on the old pins.

There ARE some seats on subway cars, but nobody I know was ever fortunate enough to occupy one—or even knows anybody who ever had.

You can save your legs by taking the air-conditioned Long Island Railroad where every passenger is assured a seat. But the cost is 50 cents each way plus subway or cab fare to the Pennsylvania Station from whence they depart. All this can amount to considerable when you have the whole family with you.

Over at the Lexington Hotel, air-conditioned Greyhound buses depart for the fair every 15 minutes. But the fare is a dollar and the time it takes to buck the surface traffic to and from the fairgrounds must be considerable.

You can go by helicopter or hydrofoil commuter craft, but the fare is out of the question for all but the most affluent.

ONCE YOU GET TO the fair, it's the same story all over again. An air-conditioned Greyhound bus will carry you leisurely about the grounds with a guide explaining all—for $3 per person.

A conveyance with a taxi meter may be utilized at about the same cost as a cab. There is a kind of 1964 version of the old Treasure Island elephant trains for 50 cents (point-to-point), and a so-called "rapid transit" but with a point-to-point fare of 25 cents.

If you need to save every cent, it only takes about 35 minutes of steady walking at a good pace to hike directly across the grounds at their narrowest point.

By the time you get back to your hotel, your feet and legs are so tired you can't bring yourself to stop soaking them long enough to hike down to the assistant manager's office to arrange for cashing a check.

RESIDENT MANHATTAN-ITES are a rough bunch, as all the world knows. They are all elbows when it comes to making their way through tight places like subway train doors.

They give no quarter; and they ask none.

During World War II these tough guys upon occasion exposed a weak spot.

Put a forlorn, obviously lost serviceman in uniform on a street corner, looking for all the world like he was beyond hope and in a moment a tough New Yorker, still talking tough, would volunteer helpful directions.

What do you know? Now they do it for fair visitors.

Wear a sports shirt without coat or tie. Toss a camera strap over your shoulder. Hold a street map or subway guide in one hand. Stand on a busy corner and study your map intently.

In a flash, one of these tough Manhattan-ites will be offering advice volubly, almost amiably.

It's unbelievable but true.

Of course they rattle off their New York-ese so fast you can't understand it, but it is reassuring and encouraging nonetheless.

THE UNITED NATIONS would be less misunderstood and more appreciated in our nation if every American could visit UN headquarters for himself.

At the same time national heritages and cultures are exalted, the one world idea first popularized by Wendell Willkie a quarter of a century ago is on every hand recognized as undeniable reality.

How can you count yourself a "citizen of the world" without diluting or downgrading your own nationality?

"Just because I am a native-born New Yorker who loves New York, must I hate Chicago? Just because a person is a native-born Virginian must he hate Ohio?" responds an American member of the UN secretariat in response to this frequently-raised question.

HYDRO-FOIL PASSENGER boats of the type proposed for commuter service on San Francisco Bay are operating in the waters around Manhattan.

It is doubtful if they will solve anything for the people who live around the Golden Gate. They are susceptible to the vagaries of wind, fog and stormy weather, just like the ferries were.

The ones here are far smaller and slower than their proponents have led many to believe.

And out at the fairground you can see a different type of monorail than the system at Disneyland and in Seattle for the World's Fair there. It appears larger than the one at Disneyland but smaller than Seattle's. It is suspended beneath an overhead rail, instead of sitting astride the rail as at Disneyland and Seattle.

This one seems to have all the problems of the others, and maybe a couple of more that those don't have.

WASHINGTON, D.C. — No self-respecting "green thumb" home gardener in Marin County would get caught dead with a lawn so poor as the one that graces the grounds of the U.S. Department of Agriculture building overlooking the capitol mall here.

It is not beyond the realm of possibility that this sorry looking lawn is in actuality some sort of high level agricultural experiment in weed growing. It has enough varieties flourishing to be just that.

But a lawn next door to the Smithsonian Institution, a block from the Washington Monument and visible from the steps of our nation's capitol — and possibly even visible from an upper corner window of the White House itself —seems hardly a proper location for a weed-growing experiment.

Anyhow, if that were it, one would expect it to be so labeled. It isn't.

The only conclusion we can draw, therefore, is that Secretary Orville Freeman and his boys in the Department of Agriculture are so busy inside their air-conditioned redoubt (preparing advice on weed control and related matters) that they haven't time to tackle the problems in their own front yard.

It's enough to undermine public confidence in the secretary and the entire efforts of the department. As they say, "What is the country coming to?"

'Righteousness' Must Precede 'Peace'

THREE MINUTES A DAY

By JAMES KELLER

ONE MISTAKE TOO MANY

A stolen jacket caught up with its owner in an odd way not long ago.

It all began when a musician was telling a friend how his apartment had been ransacked and his favorite coat was missing.

Just at that moment a stranger approached him and whispered, "How would you like to buy this jacket?"

The musician could scarcely believe his eyes. The stranger was trying to sell him the very jacket that he had lost two days before.

"Wait here. I'll be back in a minute," the owner of the coat said. He returned with a policeman, and upon questioning, the suspect admitted the theft.

Try as they may, persons who resort to dishonesty are usually caught in the web of their own deceitful ways. Even those who succeed for years, or even a lifetime, in concealing their fraudulent deeds from others are unable to fool themselves.

Think and act as one who is always in God's presence and you will never be bothered by self-reproach.

"For such is the will of God, that by doing good you should put to silence the ignorance of foolish men." (1 Peter 2:15)

Grant, O Lord, that I may be honorable and upright in all that I think, say and do.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

He Tells Of Early Goldwater Days

Editor, Independent-Journal

I wonder how a recent contributor got so many half-truths and false innuendoes into one letter. Barry Goldwater did vote no on the Civil Rights bill. But I challenge that writer to name one, just one, first class hotel in Miami that turns down Jewish patronage.

Furthermore, I have known the Goldwaters all my life — sixty-one years—and I know of no one that is more proud of his Jewish ancestors than Senator Goldwater.

As for a man of Jewish ancestry joining the Christian church, may I point out that it all started with the twelve Apostles; and I am personally acquainted with Jewish Protestants, Catholics and Mormons.

As for any social or political gain from conversion to the Episcopal faith, Barry's Jewish grandfather was one of the five more prominent members of Arizona's constitutional convention, and the family has been top-drawer socially and financially in Phoenix for the best part of a century.

As for helping minority groups, I don't recollect a Negro salesman in the Goldwater store when I was a young man, as there were mighty few of them in Phoenix at that time. But I can't remember when there was not a contingent of employees of Mexican descent. When the Senator opposed extension of the Federal nose into the matter of statutory fixing of wages, I call attention to the fact the minimum wage at the Goldwater store was already higher than the proposed Federal minimum.

Youngster Arrest Ires A Witness

EDITOR, Independent-Journal:

From my apartment, I observed what seemed to me to be the pursuit of a dangerous criminal by five grown men. This only ruined my fantasy to see that the victim was, what appeared to be, only a mortified eight-year-old.

When the child had made his escape from the Chris-Craft Sales, he was pursued by four men. Exhausted from running, he chose to hide under a dock. When his hiding place was discovered, he was literally thrown on the dock by one of the brave men. A policeman arrived, barely in the nick of time, to handcuff a dangerous "karate expert." To make sure that no further escape was possible, the policeman and another grown adult, escorted him, still handcuffed, back to the sales office.

In our society today, is the size of the punishment commensurate with the size of the criminal?

Sees Only Doom For Marin Birds

Editor, Independent-Journal:

"Silent Spring" or "Silent Fall." What's the difference?

The California mocking bird is "out," so is the swallow, but not quite. Another year or two and I'll give the remainder of our winged friends just about ten more years, regardless of species. Yes, even the buzzard, he'll be about the last to go. One or two will probably come up from Mexico.

Anyway, they are already in California, and I mean all of the different species. I might exempt the sea gull. Of all he is the only one who may survive. And a few more who spend most of their time at sea.

The rest are doomed: poison, cats, B-B guns, 22-rifles and what have you. Poisoned water or none at all is even worse destroyer. Some may become so frustrated they may covet suicide like the pole cat, who because of his one defensive weapon is branded a maniac and had to die. He used the wrong kind of perfume.

Republican Turmoil Cannot Help But Be Good News For Johnson

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Lyndon B. Johnson couldn't have it better if he had cooked it up.

Republicans are boxing themselves in, which is fine for Johnson who has to run against one of them, since nothing slows a runner like the inside of a box.

They have to climb over Vietnam, civil rights, words that can hardly be withdrawn or explained away, and a highly unpleasant intraparty struggle.

EVEN REPUBLICANS on the same side don't agree on what the issues are.

FOR TEN MONTHS Henry Cabot Lodge, as U.S. ambassador, was the Kennedy-Johnson administrations' chief agent in fighting communism in Vietnam.

He quit to come home and help Pennsylvania's Gov. William W. Scranton try to beat Sen. Barry Goldwater for the Republican presidential nomination.

If anybody is an authority on what's happening in Southeast Asia it should be Lodge. He said the war against communism there is on the right track.

AND HE SAID more: he doesn't see how Vietnam could become a campaign issue.

But Scranton, the man he came home to help, says it is. So does Goldwater. And this week so did a group of House Republicans.

They said administration policy in Vietnam was "why win?"

THERE HAD BEEN speculation that if Scranton lost the nomination to Goldwater he might run for the vice presidency on the senator's ticket.

It was reasoned that in this way the two wings of the party might be kept from flying apart.

For a while it looked possible. No matter how much he criticized Goldwater, Scranton said he would support the Arizonan if he got the nomination.

This seems out the window now, for Scranton has reached the point of saying Goldwater is unfit for the presidency. How, now, could he urge Goldwater's election?

MEANWHILE, Goldwater, by his vote against the civil rights bill, has created a problem for Northern and Eastern Republicans with large Negro voting populations in their states and districts.

The senator has said a Republican couldn't win this year without the South. And no doubt his vote won him friends among Southern Whites.

But if he should try to appease Northern Negroes, or help Northern Republican politicians, by saying if elected he would enforce the civil rights act, then he could lose what he gained among Southern whites without persuading Northern Negroes. There's no indication he has anything like this in mind.

UPON HIS RETURN, Lodge hinted he would try to get General Eisenhower to come out for Scranton before the Republican Convention.

Goldwater has a carload of convention delegates in his pocket. He worked for them the hard way and looks like a man with a stranglehold on the nomination.

He owes nothing to such big Eastern Republicans as Scranton, Lodge and Rockefeller, since all of them opposed him.

IF EISENHOWER joins them but Goldwater wins anyway, he'll owe even less. This might split the Republicans.

Johnson must be enjoying the show. News out of the White House says he won't be traveling much in July, the Republican convention month.

THE ALLEN-SCOTT REPORT

Capitol Guarded From Puerto Rican Bombers

By ROBERT S. ALLEN and PAUL SCOTT

The Capitol was under heavy guard against possible violence by Puerto Rican demonstrators at the climax of the Senate civil rights filibuster.

Although it didn't leak out, all off-duty police were summoned secretly to reinforce the regular guard after the FBI flashed a warning that four Puerto Ricans, known to be violently anti-American and trained in the use of incendiary bombs, had arrived in Washington.

ACCORDING TO FBI spotters, the four men left San Juan and flew to Baltimore, gathering in a hotel near the Capitol on June 10. The names and detailed descriptions of the men, all with records of past participation in bomb-throwing episodes, were turned over to Capitol Hill police.

However, instead of going to the Capitol, the Puerto Ricans changed their plans, checked out of their hotel and flew to New York. Indications were that they were tipped off about the police alert.

Ever since a group of Puerto Rican fanatics shot up the House of Representatives on March 1, 1954, wounding five congressmen, local authorities have been on the alert for similar attempts. A list with the names of 34 possible assassins is kept by Capitol police.

ANOTHER WELL-TO-DO Democrat will be the beneficiary of a fund-raising party—Senator Harrison Williams, N.J. This event will have some unusual angles. It will consist of a reception and volley ball party, with the charge $10 for women, $15 for men, or $25 for a couple.

Fast political footwork by Texas Governor John Connally blocked a move by backer of Attorney General Kennedy to persuade Democratic governors at the recent Cleveland conference to go on record for an "open convention" on selection of vice president. Wisconsin Governor John Reynolds proposed that at a meeting of the Democratic governors.

Connally, tipped off in advance of the move, adroitly adjourned the caucus before Reynolds could act. Reportedly, he had three other governors lined up with him. When out-maneuvered by Connally, Reynolds countered by persuading the governors to meet in Atlantic City the day before the national convention opens.

PREMIER KHRUSHCHEV is "contributing" to the Kennedy Memorial Library. The Kremlin ruler has agreed to make a tape recording of his still-secret exchanges with the late President, as well as impressions of him. Still to be determined is whether a Kennedy emissary will go to Moscow to interview Khrushchev, or he will do his own recording.

Defense Secretary McNamara is dipping into the turbulent political waters. He has agreed to allow his Washington home to be used for a $50-a-ticket fund-raising party for Representative Neil Staebler, Democratic candidate for governor of Michigan.

Conventions Do Weird Things

(EDITOR'S NOTE: On July 13, Republicans meet in San Francisco to pick a presidential candidate. In the following dispatch UPI's national reporter traces the origins of the political convention, a typically American institution, and reports on the dramatic moments of some of the great conventions of the past.)

By HARRY FERGUSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — There is nothing in the Constitution that compels political parties to hold conventions. The first one was held in 1831, largely because of an accident of circumstances, and like so many to follow it was a comedy of errors.

This political group was known as the Anti-Mason Party, meaning it was opposed to the Masonic Order. In those days presidential candidates were chosen by a caucus held by the party's members of Congress, but the Anti-Mason Party didn't have enough Congressmen to caucus.

So it called a political convention at Baltimore, and delegates from 13 states assembled. The proceedings were proper and grave until the convention nominated William Wirt. Then the comedy started. Wirt, it developed, had been nursing a little secret in his breast. He told the convention he once had been a Mason and really didn't see anything wrong with the order. He offered to resign, but his candor so impressed the delegates that the Anti-Mason Party accepted a former Mason. End of Anti-Mason Party.

The political convention, as we know it, evolved from that. This year the Republicans will hold their 28th convention at San Francisco and the Democrats their 34th at Atlantic City, N. J. Over the years conventions have been held by parties which bore neither the name of Democrat nor Republican.

The convention system is under steady attack from political purists. They say it has produced some of the worst Presidents (Grant and Harding) and that it is difficult for the best qualified man to win the nomination.

The truth is that the political convention system has worked pretty well over the years and —while it has no standing under the Constitution—it is firmly fixed in the American system. In this century there have been four conventions which deserve our attention because of the drama that unfolded on the floor or the impact made on the nation by the decision of the delegates:

1. The Republican convention of 1912. Theodore Roosevelt bolted the convention and the party, started the Bull Moose movement and caused a wide enough split in the GOP vote in November to allow Woodrow Wilson and the Democrats to win their way to power.

2. The Democratic convention of 1924. It was the longest ever held. It left the party fatigued and lacking a will to fight. It also was the first one ever carried on radio.

3. The Democratic convention of 1932. It nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt and the American way of life was never to be the same again.

4. The Republican convention of 1940. It is the classic example of how a political amateur, Wendell Willkie, can defeat the professionals at their own game.

In office or out, Theodore Roosevelt was a dominating political figure. He couldn't stand still for three consecutive minutes. He believed in what he called "the strenuous life" and he was happiest when he was campaigning for office, riding wild horses in the West, shooting big game in Africa and charging up San Juan Hill at the head of his Rough Riders in the Spanish-American War.

At the 1900 convention Roosevelt was nominated as vice president to run with William McKinley. He took over the presidency when McKinley was assassinated in 1901, won the presidential nomination on his own in 1904 and was re-elected. He probably could have been elected again in 1908, but he retired and chose William Howard Taft as his successor. Taft was nominated and elected, but Roosevelt gradually began to disapprove of what was happening in the White House.

In 1912 Roosevelt decided to make another run for the presidency and made this typical announcement: "My hat is in the ring. I am stripped to the buff and ready for the fight." His opponents were ready for the fight, too.

The convention convened in Chicago on June 18, and it immediately became apparent that Taft was in complete control of the machinery. His supporters held 37 of the 53 votes on the Republican National Committee and more than 200 delegate seats were contested by the Roosevelt forces. Taft won them all.

Somewhere along the line it dawned on Roosevelt that he couldn't lick the system. He had spent too much time shooting lions in Africa while Taft was getting a firm hand on the throttle and levers of the party machinery.

When the balloting started, Roosevelt ordered his supporters to abstain and Taft won easily. Six weeks later Roosevelt summoned a convention of his new progressive party, called the Bull Moose Party because of an exuberant statement once made by Teddy: "I'm as strong as a bull moose."

The proceedings took on a religious fervor. The band played and the delegates marched to "Onward Christian Soldiers." Roosevelt made a rousing speech telling his followers that "we stand at Armageddon and we battle for the Lord." There was no middle ground on Teddy Roosevelt — you either adored or hated him. He was years ahead of his time, advocating such things as an income tax, woman's suffrage, old age insurance, strict regulation of business and a department of labor.

In the November election Teddy's only consolation was that he beat Taft. Popular vote: Woodrow Wilson 6.2 million. Roosevelt, 4.1 million. Taft, 3.4 million.

Survivors of this one should have been awarded medals. The convention lasted 15 days, took 103 ballots, suffered in the summer heat of New York's Madison Square Garden and talked itself right out of any chance of winning the presidential election. John W. Davis, a Wall Street lawyer from West Virginia, finally emerged the winner but it was a worthless, tattered prize that was thrust into his hands. Popular vote in November: Calvin Coolidge, 15.7 million. Davis, 8.3 million.

What caused all the trouble was that an irresistible force met an immovable object. William Gibbs McAdoo of California and Alfred E. Smith of New York hated each other so violently that, rather than compromise, they preferred to let the convention fall into shambles and the party into defeat.

Smith was a Catholic, McAdoo a Protestant. The Ku Klux Klan was one of the dominant issues and behind the scenes a violent religious war was waged. Smith was wet, McAdoo was dry, and those were the days when prohibition was a fighting issue. Smith belonged to Tammany Hall and McAdoo's supporters long since had consigned Tammany Hall to Hell and hoped that the suffering would be intense.

McAdoo led most of the way, but his problem was that in those days it required a two-thirds vote to be nominated and the Smith forces always mustered enough strength to prevent it. On the first ballot it was McAdoo 431½, Smith 241. On the 50th ballot it was McAdoo 461½, Smith 320½.

Davis had been running well back with the pack. The big advantage he had was that nobody seemed to be mad at him. So when the Smith and McAdoo forces finally conceded what had been obvious to everybody else for a long time—that neither could win—Davis was the logical man. McAdoo and Smith gave up on the 100th ballot, but refused to render even a polite salute to one another. Davis won on the 103rd ballot.

It was not so much what happened on the convention floor as what came afterward that made 1932's convention a memorable and historic event. Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York looked like a winner all the way. His men controlled the convention machinery, he had a majority of the delegates on the first ballot, his strength increased steadily and he was nominated on the fourth ballot. What held him up so long was that the two-thirds vote was still required to nominate.

Roosevelt's nomination and election were due chiefly to the energetic efforts of a New York Irishman hitherto little known nationally — James A. Farley. He began working a year an a half before the convention convened in Chicago and no traveling salesman ever went so far in that span of time.

Farley has a brain that soaks up names, addresses and other useful political information like a sponge. On one trip he met 1,100 Democratic party workers, and two weeks later all of them got a personal letter from him. He pleaded the Roosevelt cause with skill and tact, he treated favorite son candidates sympathetically and got most of their votes on the second ballot. It is difficult, in reading the history of those days, to find a single instance where Farley made a tactical or strategic error.

Alfred E. Smith, who had been defeated for president four years earlier and had announced his retirement from politics, changed his mind and decided to have one more run at the nomination. It was a tempting situation because it seemed certain that whoever got the Democratic nomination would win the presidency. Herbert Hoover's chances for re-election had about been killed by the deepening economic depression.

Smith had the Massachusetts delegation, part of New York's and a scattering of others along the eastern seaboard. The first ballot: Roosevelt 666, Smith 201, and that was high tide for Smith. The convention stayed in session all night and took three ballots. Next day California and Texas came over to Roosevelt and he won on the fourth ballot. It was the end of a long friendship between Roosevelt and Smith, and the happy warrior never congratulated FDR on his victory. Popular vote in the November election: Roosevelt 27.8 million, Hoover 15.7 million.

The Republican Party was running scared as it came up to the 1940 convention. Four years earlier its candidate, Alfred M. Landon, had been crushed by Franklin D. Roosevelt with an electoral vote of 523 to 8. Now Roosevelt was breaking tradition and trying for a third term. The Republicans were looking around for a new face and a man with fresh ideas.

Three candidates dominated the pre-convention skirmishing Robert A. Taft of Ohio, Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan and Thomas E. Dewey of New York. All of them were professional politicians, wise in the ways of the voters and backed by experts. For a time Dewey seemed to have the victory locked up, and in May of 1940 67 per cent of persons questioned in the Gallup Poll said they were for him.

Wendell Willkie, born in a small Indiana town, was a public utilities lawyer who had risen to the presidency of the Commonwealth and Southern Corp. In a small circle of the federal government he was recognized and respected as an effective spokesman for free enterprise. He was a big, shaggy man whose hair fell over his eyes and who sometimes forgot to get his suits pressed.

On April 29, 1940, Willkie appeared on a popular radio program called "Information Please" and made a hit. Soon afterward he appeared in the Gallup Poll with three per cent of the persons questioned favoring him as the Republican presidential candidate. Amateurs began organizing Willkie Clubs around the country. As the nation got to know Willkie better his standing in the Gallup Poll rose to five then 10 then 29 per cent.

But popular opinion is difficult to translate into delegate strength and when the convention convened at Philadelphia on June 24, Willkie was a rank outsider and the professionals were sure they would chop him into mince meat. Charges have since been made — and they seem to have considerable validity—that somehow the Willkie amateurs got possession of all the tickets to the convention galleries. In any event through the proceedings the delegates were bombarded with steady shouts of "we want Willkie."

First ballot: Dewey 360. Taft 189. Willkie 105. Vandenberg 76. Willkie had predicted he would be nominated on the sixth ballot and his powers of prognostication were flawless. He took the lead on the fifth ballot with 429 votes. On the sixth ballot Vandenberg withdrew, his delegates flocked to Willkie and the amateur had won the big prize.

Popular vote in November: Roosevelt 27.2 million. Willkie 22.3 million.

San Francisco Not Truly Conclave Site

By HAROLD V. STREETER

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — This may surprise you — the Republican National Convention will not be held in San Francisco. Almost but not quite.

DON'T PANIC. A horde of 30,000 — delegates, presidential aspirants, party bigwigs, newsmen, radio, television and cameramen, technicians and just plain curious — will pour into San Francisco for the July 13-16 GOP conclave.

New York's Gov. Nelson Rockefeller will be with his campaign strategists at the Sheraton-Palace Hotel on Market Street.

Up on Nob Hill, Sen. Barry Goldwater will set up shop at the Mark Hopkins. Pennsylvania's Gov. William Scranton will be there, too.

In between, at the St. Francis, facing Union Square, will be Richard M. Nixon. There also, will be Henry Cabot Lodge, until recently U.S. ambassador to South Vietnam.

BUT THE COW PALACE, where the convention actually will be held, the standard bearer chosen and the party platform adopted, isn't in San Francisco. It's at the southeastern edge of the 46-square-mile city across Geneva Avenue in San Mateo county, San Francisco's peninsula neighbor.

Shuttle buses, taxis and private cars will whoosh the convention-bound in around 25 minutes down the four-lane southward leg of the Bayshore Freeway from San Francisco's 500 hotels and 65 motels to the 11-million-dollar Cow Palace and its 6,500-car parking lot. It's a scant seven-mile trip, but there's traffic.

Cow Palace? When the 30,000-square foot building opened on its 67 acres in 1941, the Works Progress Administration creation had a jaw-breaker identification: No. 1-A District Agricultural Association Grand National Horseshow, Rodeo and Livestock Exposition Building.

Some critic of Franklin Delano Roosevelt's New Deal set up this howl: "We need houses and what do they do? They build us a palace for cows." The name stuck, and has become official.

The arena will seat 16,000.

Inside the grounds, they'll feed 5,000 people an hour, everything from hot dogs to steaks — but no alcoholic beverages can be served on the premises during the convention.

The Cow Palace and communications industry are putting out five million dollars to get things ready.

TV will have some 30 cameras. More than 100 video channels will be supplied. There will be 325 teletypewriter lines, 264 radio circuits, upwards of 3,000 telephones.

Estimates are that the convention spenders will feed more than five million dollars into San Francisco's economy.

Planners have lined up more than 26,000 hotel room accommodations — including a brand new 1,200-room addition to the Hilton chain. They've rounded up 230,000 square feet of hotel space for caucus rooms.

There'll be a little bit of something for all — a fashion luncheon in Maiden Lane and a Hollywood-staged fashion show of movie star wardrobes at the Fairmont; bus tours south to former President Hoover's alma mater, Stanford, and to Muir Woods and Sausalito.

Worthy bit of advice to out-of-state visitors: Bring along a topcoat, a warm wrap. This is sunny California but up San Francisco way the summertime maximum seldom gets past 70 and when the fog and sea breeze roll in it gets down-right chilly.

California Payrolls Swell, But So Does List Of Jobless

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — Although civilian employment in California climbed to 6,593,000 during the month of May, the state made no dent at all in its total unemployment figure, which increased by 7,000 to 401,000, the same as in May, 1963.

This announcement was made by the State Department of employment to Gov. Edmund G. Brown.

The May, 1964, total employment amounted to 184,000 more than the same month of the previous year, said Albert Tieburg, director.

Despite the high employment figure, the report showed 335,000 persons a week drew compensation under the various programs administered by the department, with total benefits amounting to almost $15.4 million each week, for all programs.

California had $674 million in its unemployment insurance fund as of May 31, according to the report.

From January to May, five months of operation, the fund disbursed $226 million to persons drawing straight unemployment insurance and extended duration unemployment benefits to those persons unable to find jobs after the normal payment period for insurance elapsed.

Employers contributed $256.7 million to the fund during that same five month period, an increase of more than ten million from the previous year.

Behind The News

A Weekly Page of Background Information

Independent-Journal, Saturday, July 4, 1964

THIS WEEK In The World

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

On a cold day last January the new president of the United States called upon members of Congress to enact a strong civil rights bill as a memorial to his assassinated predecessor.

"This faith has echoed in all parts of the world."

Johnson said the civil rights bill and other legislation proposed by the fallen Kennedy should be passed "not because of our sorrow or sympathy but because they are right."

On a hot day in July, after the longest filibuster in the history of the Senate, Congress passed the bill and sent it to the president.

In making the controversial bill the law of the land on a steaming July 2, 1964, Johnson put forth these guidelines:

"Its purpose is not to punish. Its purpose is not to divide but to end division; to make our nation whole"

Alabama Gov. George Wallace said he would challenge its constitutionality in the courts.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, front-runner for the GOP presidential nomination, had voted against the bill because he considered two sections, affecting employment and public accommodations, unconstitutional.

In explaining his action, Goldwater noted he had voted for previous civil rights bills which had not contained these sections. He repeated that as chief of staff of the Arizona National Guard he had been the first to integrate a state militia.

Goldwater also made known that he was supporting a public accommodations bill now pending in Arizona. This seemed to illustrate his philosophy that matters of this nature should be decided by the states and not by the federal government.

Around The World Around The Clock

Oslo—Khrushchev finished a tour of Scandinavia with a relaxing visit to Norway where he was received with enthusiasm. This was in great contrast to the cool treatment he received in Denmark and Sweden.

Washington—Congress extended for one year the current 10 per cent excise taxes, the Senate sent to the House a 556-million-dollar federal pay raise bill and the House Ways and Means Committee okayed a one-billion-dollar increase in social security benefits.

London—Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy ended a tour of West Germany and Communist Poland with a statement he would resign after the election to enable Johnson, presuming he wins in November, to form a cabinet of his own choice. Kennedy said earlier he was available for appointment in the cabinet or as ambassador to Moscow.

Marin Has Good Spots To Enjoy The Outdoors

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Because it's summer, and the weather is nice, we are departing from our usual format with the following piece, and tell you how to get away from news — not behind it.)

California's far-flung system of state beaches and parks will offer a haven to thousands of residents and tourists this year.

The park system will commemorate the anniversary of 100 years of government reserves offered for public enjoyment. It was just 100 years ago that Abraham Lincoln reserved Yosemite National Park in California for the pleasure of the people.

Since that time, federal, as well as the state system has grown by leaps and bounds. Increases are expected in the future as far as California is concerned, as the state adds more park and beach land.

Areas for California parks have been developed in widely separated areas of the state, the beaches, the redwoods, the Sierra, the valleys, deserts and other appropriate places where people can enjoy recreational and camping facilities.

Marin County offers the following states beaches and parks and nearby facilities:

Angel Island State Park, 50 picnic units, motels, restaurants and stores, fishing, boat launching and marina (access by boat only) — 738 acres.

Golden Gate Headlands, through Fort Baker off Golden Gate Bridge: motels, restaurants and stores, fishing — 292 acres.

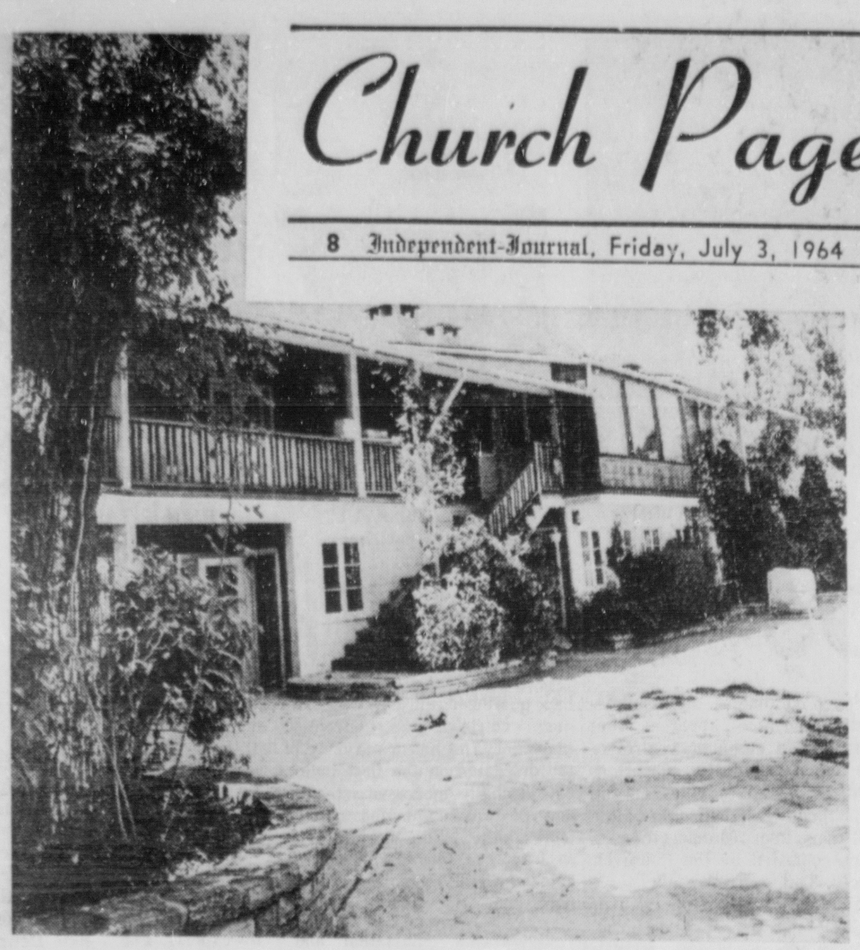

Mount Tamalpais State Park, seven miles west of Mill Valley off Highway 101: 25 campsites, 61 picnic units, motels, restaurants and stores — 1,500 acres.

Samuel P. Taylor State Park, 15 miles west of San Rafael: 55 campsites, 128 picnic units, motels, restaurants and stores—2,484 acres.

Tomales Bay State Park, four miles northwest of Inverness: 35 picnic units, motels, restaurants and stores, swimming and fishing — 234 acres.

Novitiate In Fairfax

A 10-room house on a one-acre site in Fairfax will become the first West Coast novitiate of the Daughters of the Holy Ghost in September.

The order has purchased the Andrew Russell house at 1 Fawn Ridge, near the Meadow Club, for use as a training center for preparing young girls for sisterhood.

Sister Marie Therese, Mother Superior of the Daughters of the Holy Ghost at St. Rita's in Fairfax, said the novitiate—to be known as St. Joseph's Manor—will be the second for the order in the United States. There is a center in Putnam, Conn., which will send the staff for the Fairfax novitiate. Other novitiates are locaed in Europe.

The Russell house was designed by Carl Gromme of San Rafael, and constructed in 1949. Built on two levels, it is located on a ridge with 500 feet elevation, overlooking a valley and oak-covered hills. It adjoins Marin Municipal Water District property. Grounds are landscaped. Other features include a fallout shelter and a partially covered outdoor dining area.

The Daughters of the Holy Ghost are primarily engaged in education work, and also run some missions. The order confax.

Girls interested in preparation for sisterhood may apply to the Fairfax convent, Mother Superior said.

The property was sold by Don Brewer of the Jane Forster Realty in Fairfax.

Seminary Professor Tells Baptist Stand On Prayer

James William McClendon, professor of theology and philosophy of religion at the Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary, Strawberry, writes here against the Becker Amendment which would reverse the controversial "Prayer Ruling" of the U.S. Supreme Court. Space does not permit running his article in full. Deletions are indicated by dots.

By JAMES W. McCLENDON

There is now a reasonable hope that the Becker Amendment, which would reverse the recent Supreme Court rulings on religion in the public schools, is going to die in committee in the present session of Congress.

However, the sentiment for such action will still be present, and Americans concerned for the integrity of the Bill of Rights, and especially for the freedom of religion from the control of government, will be wise to remain on guard.

This involves two things. One is a clear understanding both of what the courts have ruled, and of what Christian principles are sustained by those rulings. The other is a positive program of action in regard to religion and the schools.

The courts have ruled, in a series of cases . . . that government, in the form of state legislatures, school boards, and the like, may not compose prayers, or choose prayers, or arrange worship services, or appoint scriptures to be read in worship services, for public schools. . . . And the court has said that the government may not do this, that it is not the busines of government to establish religion. . . .

With this ruling, most thoughtful Baptists have agreed, and our major Baptist conventions agreed, in their recent sessions in Atlantic City.

We have agreed partly because of our Baptist heritage—we have come from people who knew what it was to live with a state-established religion, and who saw that such a way was not wise. . . .

And our Baptist heritage is that government is not to be in the religion business. . . . We Baptists have a long experience of the need for religious liberty, and we are not ready to see the documents which guarantee that liberty in this country abolished by the Becker Amendment. . . .

Now it may puzzle some that so may Baptists, along with Roman Catholics, Jews, Presbyterians, and many other religious bodies, oppose an amendment which would establish religion in our country. 'Aren't you in favor of religion?' it will be asked. But I remind these inquirers that there is religion and religion. There is the worship of the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and there is the worship of the Golden Calf. There is the worship of the God of Israel, and there is the bowing down to the golden idol, the offering of incense to Caesar. We need to be on our guard against those who urge some 'Supreme Being' on us—their 'Supreme Being' may very well be Caesar deified. . . .

For the heritage we Baptists hold, then, and for the sake of the easily-perverted Biblical faith God has given us, we must be on our guard. . . .

At the same time, though, we need to ask ourselves, what good way, what constitutional way, is there of attaining some of the goals which advocates of this amendment have spoken of? I therefore offer here for discussion four proposals, which I regard as an alternative to the Becker Amendment, for the conduct of Baptists with respect to the public schools:

(1) The Constitution as the courts have interpreted it forbids state-sponsored religion, but it guarantees the free exercise of non-state sponsored religion. It seems to me (and as far as I know this concept has not been tested by the courts) that this means that no school board could discipline or correct a teacher, and no court could cause the teacher to desist, from the voluntary expression of the teacher's own religion, so long as that voluntary expression of faith was not designed to coerce a pupil. . . .

(2) On the other hand, the freedom just mentioned ought to be exercised with due regard to the main purpose of the schools, which is to teach literacy, not piety. Schools are for education, not for worship. We live in a pluralist society. Our neighbors will be safe for us to live with only if they are educated. . . .

If we close anyone out of the schools, either by regulation or by making the school religiously offensive to him, we end our chance of making an American of him. Let us therefore temper our freedom with wisdom, not letting that freedom spoil the school for a minority.

(3) Again, some of us know that to deal with a child in any way is to affect his character. Therefore public school will in some way affect the child's character. The Becker advocates think that state-sponsored prayers will build character. I doubt this.

I propose a new development. Let us establish in our Baptist colleges and seminaries departments devoted to helping our teachers prepare themselves, by study and research, to develop the character of the children whom they are to teach in ways that are consistent with our Baptist faith, and which cooperate with our laws rather than rejecting them."

(4) Finally, for those who desire a specifically Christian (or Jewish, or Buddhist, or denominational) weekday training for their children, or a sort the public school cannot give: Let us provide for these, not unconstitutional tax money for parochial schools, but a cooperative, shared-time program, in which the church school supervises that education which is to be religious or doctrinal, and the public school sets standards for every child, and teaches every child those common elements in our culture which parochial schools could only duplicate.

This might not only serve to give our own children better religious training, but might serve to bring into the main current of American life children who would otherwise be sheltered in parochial schools all the way.

These four proposals are offered as a program for discussion, and as a viable alternative to the perils of the 'prayer' amendment.

Mosk Frowns On Reapportionment Before Election

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Reapportionment of the State Legislature should not begin before the November election, Atty. Gen. Stanley Mosk has advised the California Supreme Court.

Mosk's statement, released yesterday in Los Angeles and mailed to San Francisco for filing with the high court, was a reply to Los Angeles Mayor Samuel W. Yorty's petition for immediate reapportionment, to give Los Angeles more Senators.

Mosk's reaction:

"Interference with the 1964 election, candidates for which were nominated June 2, is neither required nor practical . . . The task of reshaping the district will be extremely complex."

Mosk said that although the U. S. Supreme Court's June 15 decision requires the Legislature to reapportion districts so each has comparable population, the court did not demand immediate action.

Recruit Wins Honor

LOT OF DRIVING FOR FATHER ON HIS DAY?

Father's Day, June 21, was the granddaddy of all days for the Golden Gate Bridge.

Directors of the Golden Gate Bridge and Highway District, attending the building and operating committee meeting yesterday, learned that June was also a record month for the bridge.

There were 2,194,382 vehicles over the bridge during the month. And on June 21 there were 90,131. The 41 tolltakers on duty that day averaged one vehicle every 12 seconds for 24 hours.

Tolltaking was almost breathtaking.

Cafe Tiff With Officer Leads To Jail

A 27-year-old San Rafael man was booked at county jail early today after he allegedly knocked a police officer into a booth at the King Cotton Restaurant, 831 Francisco Boulevard, San Rafael.

Thomas Marion Redmayne of Apt. 43, 79 Woodland Avenue, was charged with disturbing the peace, resisting arrest and assaulting a police officer.

A waitress, Sharon Kay Hall, 25, of Apt. 14, 180 Miller Avenue, Mill Valley, was treated at San Rafael General Hospital for facial bruises she incurred when she got too close to a fist-fight between Redmayne and Joseph C. Hildreth, 33, of 715 C Street, San Rafael.

Patrolman Phillip D. Green was called to the restaurant to assist patrolman Gary K. Walter, who was on duty there when the fight broke out. Green said he was attempting to help Walter take Redmayne outside when Redmayne struck him in the forehead, knocking him into the booth, where he landed on top of a customer.

The two officers then subdued Redmayne and took him to jail.

Redmayne was later released on $1,210 bail. He is scheduled to appear in court at 1:30 p.m. Monday.

Bring On Russians! U. S. Stars Sparkle

NEW YORK (AP)—"I send my regards to the Ter," said broad jumper Ralph Boston.

"Tell Valery I'll see him soon," added an exhuberant John Thomas.

Thus the gauntlet was throw to the Soviet Union's track and field stars by two happy winners in the U.S. Olympic Trials yesterday at Randall's Island.

Boston, who will defend his championship next October in Tokyo, excited a crowd of 13,000 with a leap of 27 feet, 4 inches and then 27-5½, both eclipsing the world record of 27 3¼ held by Russia's Igor Ter-Ovaesyan.

Both were disallowed for recognition because the wind was blowing harder than the 4.47 miles per hour officially allowed.

The wind was 5.8 m.p.h. on the first of Ralph's jumps and 15.2 on the second.

Thomas, the rangy Bostonian who was the goat of the 1960 Olympics in Rome, assured himself of another shot at Russia's great Valery Brumel by winning the high jump with an effortless leap of 7-1.

The tall New Englander was almost beside himself with joy. "I hurt my foot just at the end of the indoor season and I didn't know whether I would make it or not," he said. "This shows that I can do it. I'm anxious for another shot at Valery and at the Olympics.

Thomas failed to qualify for the Russian meet at Los Angeles July 25-26, finishing third when only the first two places made it.

As winner of the high jump final, he becomes an automatic nominee for the Olympic team, as do all other finals winners here. The next five best qualifiers get a shot at the other two places in the final trials at Los Angeles Sept. 12-13.

Jay Luck, a Yale graduate running for the New Haven Track Club, pulled the biggest surprise of the opening day by winning the 400-meter hurdles in 49.4 seconds, just 2/10ths of a second off the world record. He beat such stars as Bill Hardin, Rex Cawley and Chris Stauffer.

Others to clinch team berths were Trenton Jackson of Illinois in the 100 meters, 10.1; Hal Connolly, in the hammer throw, 225-4; Jim Stevenson, in the javelin, 242-8; Dallas Long, in the shot put, 64-9½, and Bob Schul, in the 5,000-meter race, 14:10.8.

Upset! Bueno Wins At Wimbledon

Aussie Gal Loses Her Bid For 'Slam'

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI)—Maria Buena of Brazil upset heavily-favored defending champion Margaret Smith of Australia, 6-4, 7-9, 6-3, today to win the women's singles title in the Wimbledon Tennis Championships.

It was the third Wimbledon crown for Miss Bueno, who also won in 1959 and 1960.

Miss Smith's defeat wrecked her campaign for a "grand slam" of the world's major feminine tennis championships. She already had won the Italian, French, and Australian titles and needed the Wimbledon and then the U.S. championships to complete the "slam."

Her defeat also blocked an Australian sweep of the Wimbledon singles crowns this year. Roy Emerson of Australia won the men's championship yesterday.

Underdog Maria took one hour and 29 minutes to down Miss Smith in the most exciting and crowd-pleasing match of the two-week tournament.

Miss Smith won the title here last year against Billie Jean Moffitt of Long Beach, Calif.

Not since Maureen (Little Mo) Connolly of the United States took a grand slam in 1953 has a woman won Australian, French, Wimbledon and U.S. titles in the same year.

PRESS BOX VIEWS

BY JACK HANLEY

It's Still Difficult To Realize Davenport Relegated To Utility

Jack Hanley

It is difficult to realize that Jim Davenport, the Golden Glove third baseman of the Giants for six years, now is relegated to an infield utility role.

A psychiatric examination would have been ordered forthwith for anyone suggesting this spring that Peanut would be riding the bench before the All-Star break. Yet, that is precisely what has happened.

When Alvin Dark moved Davenport from third to second this spring to make room for Jim Ray Hart, the skeptics scoffed: "Hart may have the bat but he hasn't the glove. Davenport will be back at third before the end of May."

However, Hart's glove, despite 15 errors, hasn't cost one ball game while his bat has won several. So Davenport stayed at second, that is, until Hal Lanier was called up June 18 and Gil Garrido was sent back to Tacoma.

Lanier's second base play has been so sensational that Davenport no longer has a steady job there. It wasn't only Lanier's glove but his bat that put Peanut on the bench. Lanier hit .471, 8-for-17, in his first major league series at St. Louis. Nobody expected him to keep hitting that way but he still is a respectable .280.

DAVENPORT HAS had a terrible time at bat ever since the season opened. It has been a constant battle for him to keep his average above .200. It presently is at .209. But that isn't a true barometer of his clutch hitting in at least two games.

Davenport's two-run homer in the 15th inning beat the Mets 6-4 in Candlestick May 16 and his two-out triple in the 23rd, preceding Del Crandall's pinch double, beat the Mets 8-6 in New York May 31.

WHEN DAVENPORT was moved from third to second this spring, he evaluated the switch realistically.

"It may help me stay around in baseball several years longer when the time comes to be classified as a utility man," he said. "When a club carries a utility infielder they like a man who can play second."

Little did Davenport realize his utility classification was only months away.

The fact that Davenport can play third, short or second makes him the most valuable utility man on the team. He may not be jumping with joy over riding the bench for the first time since his rookie year of 1958 but he is grateful to have the second base experience under his belt.

As he said this spring, it may help him stay around several years longer.

Herbel Slips In Rookie Of Year Derby

Richie Allen is one up on Ron Herbel in the head-to-head portion of their battle for rookie of the year honors.

As a result, his Philadelphia Phils are a notch closer to Herbel's San Francisco Giants in the more important struggle for the National League lead.

Allen, who said "I didn't even know who he was," slashed two singles in two appearances at the plate against the Giants' right-hander, then added two walks and a home run off relief hurling Friday night as the Phils won 5-1 and moved within a half-game of the first-place Giants.

The visitors broke a three-game Giants winning streak and handed them only their third defeat in 15 games.

The winner of today's game was assured of first place on the night of July 4 and, according to baseball lore, the team most likely to win the pennant. Jack Sanford, 5-7, pitched against Philadelphia's Jim Bunning, 8-2. Tomorrow's series closer pits San Francisco's Juan Marichal, 11-3, against Art Mahaffey or Dennis Bennett.

.302 AVERAGE

Allen, a husky third baseman, was the consensus pre-season rookie of the year selection and his .302 batting average has borne out the pick.

But the surprising Herbel got into contention with two shutouts, a 6-3 record and a 2.01 earned run average through June 30.

A double play kept Allen's single from doing any harm in the first inning last night but his third-inning hit was the first of three two-out safeties that produced three runs and chased Herbel.

The Giants managed an unearned run off Ray Culp in the third. But the Phillie right-hander kept six hits scattered and capitalized on three double plays in the three middle innings.

Ruben Amaro, meanwhile, doubled an insurance run home in the eighth inning and Allen cracked his 16th homer in the ninth.

Allen's blow to right field off Bob Shaw is the only home run off the reliever in his 60⅓ innings pitched this year.

Allen escaped mishap in the fifth inning when Jose Pagan lashed a liner off the infielder's left shin. Allen didn't even limp, causing some observers to figure the ball hit him on the side of the shoe.

But after the game he displayed a nasty bruise and said, "If I had seen the ball, I'd probabl been seen the ball, I'd probably been didn't think about it hurting."

Machen-Patterson Fight Rated Even

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Will the referee for Sunday night's Floyd Patterson-Eddie Machen fight please stand up?

Amid preparations yesterday for the 12-round heavyweight clash, a mixup emerged over whether Teddy Waltham, secretary of the British Boxing Board of Control, or Fernando Pica of Italy, one of six referees approved by the European Boxing Union for major fights, would handle the bout.

Stockholm afternoon papers reported that Waltham had been approved by Swedish promotor Edwin Ahlquist after both the Patterson and Machen camps had turned down Ahlquist's original recommendation of Andrew Smythe.

Smythe was referee at the 1958 fight in Goteborg, in which Ingemar Johansson floored Machen in the first round and qualified for a shot at Patterson's title.

Later local press reports said Ahlquist got the impression that Waltham was unable to attend the bout and asked the EBU to name the referee.

Waltham, however, said "I'll arrive in Stockholm Saturday morning." Pica also is expected from Rome.

Meanwhile, the fight was shaping up as a virtual nonbetting affair. No odds were being quoted on the fight, which observers saw as an even match.

Machen's trainer Al Silvani had a victory party already lined up at a downtown restaurant with Singer Frank Sinatra as the guest of honor.

Johansson, who beat Patterson for the title iin 1959 and lost it back in 1960, picked Machen.

"Floyd has only his left hook" said Johansson, "but Machen knows everything about boxing, punches, straight rights, hooks, and he is quicker than Floyd, not only in the ring, but also in the head."

The fight, being staged at 55,000-seat open-air Raasunda Stadium, will start at 9:30 a.m. PDT tomorrow. The advance ticket sale has grossed approximately $300,000.

Pete Retzlaff May Quit Pro Football

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—End Pete Retzlaff of the National Football League Philadelphia Eagles disclosed yesterday he is considering retiring as a player.

Retzlaff said there is a "strong possibility I may retire from football before the start of the season."

He said he is considering a business opportunity and added, "I can't play fotoball forever and this may be too good to pass up."

You Can Blame Me, Says Dodger Veep

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Emil Joseph (Buzzie) Bavasi says he's the man to blame if the Los Angeles Dodgers are unsuccessful.

The vice president and general manager of the Dodgers thus again lived up to his credo of shouldering the responsibility for his team's failures while passing along the credit when they are successful.

"I haven't given up on our club yet this season," Bavasi said just prior to the break in the season for the All-Star game. "But if we're not doing as well as might be expected of the world's champions, it's my fault."

Bavasi made his statement with the Dodgers in eighth place as they closed in on the mid-season break for the All-Star game.

"You can't blame the manager, the coaches or even the players if I fail to get them the big hitter we need to go with our great pitching. That's my job as general manager. But I thought we had a couple of pretty good hitters, based on what they did last year."

Bass Derby At Bolinas

Striped Bass Derby, sponsored by the Bolinas Rod and Boat Club, opened yesterday and will run through Sept. 30.

The event, open to all who fish the Bolinas-Stinson Beach area, offers some 60 prizes to lucky anglers.

Weigh in stations are at Smiley's Bait Shop in Bolinas and Bill's Superette in Stinson Beach. It costs $1 to register each catch.

Prizes include a complete beach spinning rod and reel, a complete boat rod and reel, a pair of water skis, an electric boat horn and a folding boat anchor and range down to more than 50 other prizes having a value of from $2 to $20.

Proceeds from the derby will aid in the development of the newly formed organization, devoted to expanding and improving fishing and boating activities in the area. Persons interested in knowing more about the club may write the Bolinas Rod and Boat Club, P.O. Box 248, Bolinas, California.

CHI CHI'S CLOWNING MIFFS FELLOW PROS

Rodriguez, whose 36 hole total of 134 led the $125,000 Whitemarsh Open Golf Tournament by one stroke today has been told in no uncertain terms by some fellow pros to stop clowning.

The 29-year-old Puerto Rican tried to act subdued yesterday as he tourned the 6,807-yard Whitemash Valley County Club golf course in four-under-par 68. With his first round 66, he led Dave Marr, the Texan playing out of New Rochelle, N. Y. Marr had rounds of 67-68-135.

"Some of the pros are getting too hot at me," said Rodriguez after completing his second round. "They don't wish me to kid."

However, the slim built pro takes golf as serious as the next pro and said the bantering on the course merely relaxes him and enables him to play better.

He tried to contain himself yesterday after one of his partners complained about Rodrigues' display of levity during the second round. But it didn't work. At one point, overjoyed about a shot, he leaped over a rope and shook hands with a little girl. He traded remarks with spectators such as:

Galleryite: "Go get 'em Chi Chi, I've got a bet on you." Rodrigue : "So have I, $24,000 worth (the Whitemarsh first prize)."

DANCE ON 18TH

Later, he did a dance around the 18th green when a birdie putt rolled around the cup and came out.

Rodriguez intimated thep ros will just have to put up with him as the new clown prince of golf.

The pros shattered par again yesterday at Whitemarsh as 45 shot under the 36-36-72 regulation figures. Eighteen equalled the 72.

Trailing Rodriguez and Marr as the field headed into today's third round of the four-day, 72-hole test, were Terry Dill, Dan Sikes, Pete Brown and Don Fairfield, each with 36 holes totals of 136; Tommy Jacobs and Howie Johnson at 137, and six at 138 including Masters champion Arnold Palmer and Tony Lema, winner of three of the last four PGA tournaments.

PGA champion Jack Nicklaus was at 139, along with Gary Player. U. S. Open king Ken Venturi trailed by six strokes at 140.

Of the starting field of 147, 99 qualified for the final 36 holes. The cuttoff was 147. Such seasoned pros as Don January, Bob Goalby, Jerry Barber, Tommy Aaron and Rex Baxter Jr. did not make it.

Tebbetts made out the line-up for the Indians and then said if he should tire, Strickland would again take over the chores of running the club.

DIVING POOL—Workmen prepare diving pool for concrete to be poured within two weeks at the College of Marin physical education complex. The complex is expected to be ready by the opening of school in September. (Independent-Journal photo)

Gym Dandy At Kentfield

The physical education complex at College of Marin, a project that is costing nearly $1.5 million, is about 80 per cent completed, reported Dr. Stephen E. Epler, college president.

Final contract with Ralph Larsen and Son Construction Co. of South San Francisco was $1,480,479.

The project, when completed, will include an H-shaped gymnasium building complex, swimming and diving pools, furniture and equipment, temporary and permanent turfed play areas, game courts and parking facilities.

Dr. Epler hopes construction will be completed in time for fall classes which start Sept. 10 at Marin.

Center of the complex will be a 1,500-seat gymnasium with basketball, tennis, volleyball and badminton courts. The gym is pretty far along as workmen prepare to lay the floor. The lighting has already been installed in the gymnasium.

DIVING POOL

The diving pool has already been dug and the concrete will be poured in about two weeks. Next to that pool will be a racing pool, although work on that pool has not yet begun. The diving pool measures 30 by 50 feet and the racing pool will be 75 by 59 feet. There will be adjoining seating for spectators.

Flanking the gymnasium on both sides are two long building sections which will include men's and women's locker and shower facilities, one on either side of the gym.

These sections will also include a 38 by 40-foot combatives room, a 48 by 40-foot gymnastics room with 21-foot ceiling, a 70 by 45-foot woman's exercise room, locker rooms, multi-purpose classrooms, offices, lobby and snackbar.

The class is for members of the Peacock Gap Tennis and Swimming Club, Peacock Gap Country Club and residents of the Peacock Gap area.

TWIN BILL TONIGHT IN MARIN LEAGUE

A Fourth of July doubleheader tonight at San Rafael's Albert Park will highlight this weekend's action in the Marin County Semi-Pro Baseball League.

DeMaestri's Fairfax Garage (2-1) will vie with the Mill Valley Merchants (1-1) in the first game at 6:30, and league leading Billings-Hutchison (3-0) will take on the San Anselmo Merchants (1-2) in the nightcap at 9 o'clock.

A solo game tomorrow will pit the Novak Builders (0-3) against the Tiburon Sox (1-1) on the Novato High School diamond, 1:30 p.m.

TOP PERFORMERS

Mike Telegin of the San Anselmo Merchants is the leading batter and Bob DeRosa of the Billings - Hutchison Builders the top pitcher going into this weekend's games, according to league statistics.

Telegin has six hits in nine atbats for a .667 average while DeRosa has a 2-0 won-lost record with a 0.00 earned run average in 13⅔ innings on the mound.

can record but, like Boston's leaps, was not allowed because of the wind.

Gerry Ashworth of the Southern California Striders was second, also in 10.1.

Bob Hayes, who has done 9.1 in the 100-meters, didn't compete because of an injury suffered in last week's AAU championships. However, he is expected to be permitted to compete in the final trials by special committee action.

The 5,000-meters proved the high point of the program with a skinny 18-year-old kid from Spokane, Wash., Jerry Lindgren, setting the pace most of the way. Bob Schul of Dayton, Ohio, put on one of his blistering spurts on the final leg to beat out Bill Dellinger of Portland, Ore., with Lindgren falling back to third.

Finals were scheduled today in the pole vault, triple jump, discus, 110-meter high hurdles, 800-meters, 400-meters, 200-meters, 3,000-meter steeplechase and 1,500-meters.

Archie San Romani Jr. of Portland, Ore., with 3:49, and Dyrol Burleson, 3:54.7, led qualifying heats in the 1,500-meters.

Title Fight Next For Fresno Boxer

NEW YORK (AP) — "You've got to manhandle this guy to beat him," Wayne Thornton's handlers screamed at him in his corner between rounds.

The 24-year-old fighter from Fresno, Calif. followed instructions, gained a split 10-round decision over Eddie Cotton of Seattle last night and an apparent shot at light heavyweight champion Willie Pastrano.

Teddy Brenner, matchmaker for Madison Square Garden where Thornton won the nationally-televised scrap, said he hoped to make the Thornton-Pastrano title match for New Orleans sometime in October.

"The match would go good down there," Brenner said. Thornton is a native of Oak Grove, La. and Pastrano is from New Orleans, so they're both Louisiana boys."

It was an action-crammed bout with Thornton flooring the veteran 38-year-old Cotton for an automatic eight count in the third round and Thornton being saved by the bell ending the eighth round as he reeled across the ring and into the ropes.

At the end Judge Frank Forbes and Referee Zack Clayton voted for Thornton, 5-4-1 and 5-3-2, respectively. The other judge, Bill Recht, had Cotton on top 5-3-2 as did The Associated Press 6-3-1. A ringside poll of seven sports writers gave it to Cotton 5-2.

Cotton just sighed in the dressing room. "It was one of those things," he said. "I thought I won." Whitey Bimstein, his trainer, joined with Chemeres in declaring "the other guy got away with murder in there."

Thornton weighed 175, Cotton 172. Thornton's record now is 31-6-1, Cotton's 51-16-1.

Softball Tourney In San Anselmo Set For August

Fifth annual San Anselmo Invitational Softball Tournament probably will begin on Wednesday, Aug. 12, and conclude Sunday, Aug. 22, it was announced yesterday by Frank Quinn, San Anselmo Recreation Director.

Quinn emphasized that these dates are tentative. "We will begin a week earlier if possible," he stated.

Current plans call for a six-team round-robin tournament with single games on the week-day evenings and double and triple-headers on Saturdays and Sundays.

"As usual, we will invite only the top clubs from the Bay Area," Quinn commented. "Top-caliber teams provide much more spectator appeal."

Quinn said that last year's tournament, won by Two-Rock Army of Petaluma, attracted close to 5,000 softball enthusiasts, or an average of more than 300 per game.

Teams already indicating interest include Two-Rock, Sohner Tree Service, Fairchild, and Capella Bros. The last three are Marin clubs.

Ticonderoga Nears Tahiti Race Mark

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The 72-foot ketch Ticonderoga appeared on its way today to an elapsed time record in the Los Angeles to Tahiti yacht race.

Sailing master Dan Elliott reported from the Ticonderoga that the yacht was 1,020 miles from Tahiti.

The record of 18 days, 18 hours and 5 minutes was set in 1961 by Fuller Calloway's 98-foot ketch Morning Star.

Elliott said he expects the Ticonderoga to better the record by eight hours.

The 50-foot sloop Rascal was 448 miles astern of the Ticonderoga.

New Tennis Setup For Harvard U.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass (AP) — A $250,000 indoor tennis facility is a new addition to Harvard University's athletic plant. The structure, containing three courts, is a gift of W. Palmer Dixon, a 1925 graduate who is a former national intercollegiate squash racquets champion.

It is the first major addition to the athletic plant since the Watson ice hockey rink was built in 1955.

Twins Boss Says Lee Throws Hard

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Sam Mele, manager of the Minnesota Twins, was impressed the first time he saw rookie relief pitcher Bob Lee of the Los Angeles Angels this spring.

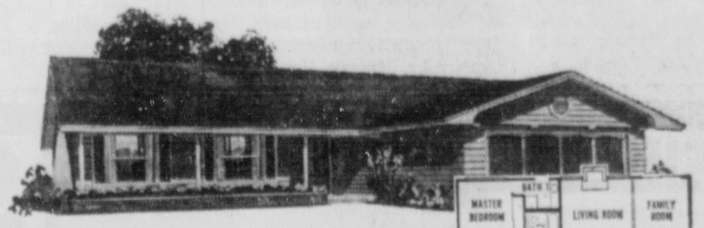

"Lee throws as hard as Dick Radatz of the Boston Red Sox," says Mele. "Lee's pitch doesn't move like Radatz' but he throws just as hard.

Lee is 6-feet-3 and 230. Radatz is 6-feet-5 and weighs 240 pounds.

DRAMA REVIEW

Straw Hat Revue Given Resounding Welcome

By KARL BARRON

The Festival Theater has done it again! "What's In It For Me?", the new Straw Hat Revue, opened last night at the Bolinas Avenue theater in San Anselmo, and treated a packed house to a twenty-course banquet of laughs, spoofs, comedy innovations and sharp satire. This fare continues Wednesday through Saturday at 8:30 p.m.

Director Elizabeth Berryhill, female Houdini of theater, opened a full bag of tricks and spread sheer magic. Under co-direction of Elizabeth Fuller, here are vitality, professional know-how and theatrical joie de vivre.

From the Prologue—"Me Not Tarzan", in which images of the actors and their real selves merge in confusion (see article I-J Magazine June 27) to the final scene which spoofs background music for films, the audience is carried away.

Cavorting in the reconstructed theater are such well known Strawhatters as Robert Cowell, Marjorie Casebier, Lois de Banzie, Buffy Ford and Elizabeth Fuller. These five have made of the moue and grimace a fine art.

New faces include Bob Chiappari, who excels as a comic Kabuki player in Casey At The Bat—a masterpiece of staging and costume. Len Shropfer lends a fund of talent and vigor, while Howard Taylor, another familiar face, shows his usual poise. Attractive Ann Wichman and Judy Knotts add vivacity and charm, and are complemented by new comers Dan Scarlett and Alain Flower.

Larry Snyder as musical director provides the best background and accompaniment since the Strawhatters came to Marin. If we would quarrel with anything, however, it would be his song "Sweet Little Child", performed well by Miss Ford. It's a good song, but it seems out of place in the show.

Carol Brumm is missed as a performer, but her costuming of the production is as outstanding and inventive as have been her many characterizations. Choreography by Jeannde Herst is always there, but does not intrude.

John Corey's light design deserves praise, for it's a complex show. The opening still of the Kabuki skit uses backlighting in a magic lantern effect that is a real eye catcher.

Film work is by Vanna and Robert Franks—he the cameraman, she responsible for the unique art work. Louis Bennett was still photographer and you'll recognize his voice on tape narration.

A slight technical breakdown last night marred the opening of "Leidbeiningar Umhirdingu Bufjar"—but the actors carried on to the Icelandic Film Saga's uproarious conclusion.

What's it all add up to? When you hear the title of Festival Theater's summer long production "What's In It For Me?", the answer is:

"Plenty."

Larkspur Merchants To Lease Parking Lot

Eight Larkspur merchants who are members of the Chamber of Commerce Thursday decided to go ahead with plans to lease a vacant lot in the 400 block of Magnolia Avenue for a public parking lot.

The lot extends back to Locust Avenue. It was formerly leased to the Bank of America by Hugh Wood, according to Kenneth Anderson, president of the Larkspur Chamber.

Coed's Vacation To Include Open Heart Surgery Stint

Since Easter vacation, 18-year-old Judy Barber has known her summer plans would include more than preparing for entering college in September.

Monday she will enter Palo Alto-Stanford Medical Center Hospital where she will have a rendezvous with a team of noted surgeons for open heart surgery.

At least 18 pints of blood will be needed for the delicate operation. Blood of all types may be donated in her name at the Marin Blood Center, 506 Fourth Street, San Rafael.

Judy, the daughter of Mrs. Nancy S. Barber of 21 Teel Road, Belvedere, and James H. Barber of Los Altos, graduated from Redwood High School last month. She majored in English and journalism and was the exchange editor on the "Redwood Bark," the student newspaper there.

She plans to enter either the University of the Pacific in Stockton or Colorado Women's College in Denver this fall.

During her recovery at the hospital, Judy hopes to catch up on her reading and when she returns to Belvedere, work on making her college wardrobe.

Novato-San Jose Plan On State Agenda

If approved by the board, the proposal will be submitted to voters in the districts.

Evolution Ban Petitions Fail To Show Up

PHOENIX (UPI — Arizona voters in the November election will not have a chance after all to decide the issue of whether evolution should be taught in Arizona public schools.

Supporters of a move to ban teaching of the theoery, led by the Rev. Aubrey Moore, pastor of a Southern Baptist Church here, failed to file petitions yesterday to put the matter on the ballot.

Several months ago Rev. Moore began a campaign to obtain initiative signatures, arguing that grade school children were unable to differentiate between theory and fact.

A spokesman at the secretary of state's office said he had not heard from Moore recently and assumed the pastor was unsuccessful in obtaining the required 54,584 signatures before yesterday's deadline.

Moore's drive to circulate petitions was opposed by 45 local church leaders.

Music Brightens Art, Garden Fair

By MAYBELLE SPECKMANN

Gay tunes and lyrics of popular musicals added the attraction of music to the visual delights of the Marin Art and Garden Fair in Ross last night.

Some 15 famous songs from hits by Cole Porter, Lerner and Lowe and Rodgers and Hammerstein were the right kind of fare for the holiday mood of the large crowd that filled Northgate Center for the program.

Soprano Corinne Swall and baritone Stanley Noonan were the stars with a 20-piece orchestra under Hugo Rinaldi and a San Rafael High School choir of 22 voices.

In solos or in duets with Corinne Swall, Noonan—new to us—was pleasing both because of his powerful and warm vocal quality and dramatic ability.

Both had a flair for comedy—she in "I Am a Girl Who Can't Say No," and he in "I'm Getting Married in the Morning."

Rinaldi and the orchestra kept the tempo at a suitable lively pace.

The teen-agers' singing suffered from too great a distance for microphones. They were heard at their best in the first number, "Another Opening, Another Show," and the closing "Climb Every Mountain" by the entire ensemble, which proved a good finale.

Fairfax School Meet

Trustees of the Fairfax School District will hold a special session at Central School at 7:45 p.m. Tuesday for election of officers and approval of the budget for fiscal 1964-65. The budget is to be published July 26.

REMEMBER

Grandma's house where you looked down on the orchard and then past to other homes nestled in greenery? This lot is like that — but the house is delinitely grandson's! Modern beamed ceiling throughout and paneled walls give a warm glow to the w/w carpeting and huge, used brick fireplace. The kitchen is in sunny yellow with country wall paper — and you can almost smell the fresh bread baking. And where grandma's house had a big attic, the bonus here is 2 large rooms downstairs with another fireplace. If your heart is sentimental, your mind practical and your pocketbook slim — this is the home for you at only $31,750. Give us a ring today to see it.

Two Divers Safe After Living 525 Feet Under Water

MIAMI (UPI) — Two American divers who lived at record underwater depths in the Bahamas for two days were reported in "fine shape and good spirits" yesterday in a decompression chamber aboard the research ship sea diver, en route here from northwest providence channel.

A radio-telephone report to UPI from the vessel said divers Jon Lindbergh, 32, and Robert Stenuit, 30, were "resting comfortably in the chamber."

Lindbergh is the son of famed aviator Charles Lindbergh.

They spent 48 hours living in a specially designed, inflatable heavy rubber balloon-like dwelling which was equipped with bunks, communications equipment, food, instruments and an oxygen supply. It was anchored at a depth of 525 feet. But they left the dwelling and swam around at a depth of 430 feet.

Girl Urges Pope To Save Father In Cuban Prison

MIAMI (UPI) — Little refugee Maria Beruvides appealed to Pope Paul VI last night to intercede with Fidel Castro's revolutionary regime on behalf of her father, reported near death in a Cuban prison.

"My daddy is critically ill," the girl said in a cable to the Vatican.

Maria's father has been operated on twice, and is in critical condition.

He is one of the 30 former air force fliers who were acquitted by one of Castro's revolutionary tribunals in 1959 and then retried and sentenced by direct order of the bearded premier.

Federal Transit Bill Still Has Not Solved All Finance Issues

By DON BACON
Advance News Service

WASHINGTON — Passage by Congress of the 375-million-dollar mass transit bill may mark the beginning of a new and brighter era for the urban commuter but it will not end the dispute over how extensively the federal government should participate in it.

The bill passed the House, 212 to 189, this month. A similar bill cleared the Senate in April. Differences in the two versions will be negotiated in a House-Senate conference, unless—as now seems possible—the Senate agrees to accept the House version.

Sen. Harrison A. Williams (D-N.J.), sponsor of the senate bill and a leading proponent of urban mass transit, foresees little difficulty in working out the differences either on the Senate floor or in conference. The House-passed measure is closer to his original proposal than the Senate version.

The principal difference between the two is a federally-guaranteed bond provision in the Senate bill, which was deleted by the House. The Senate bill would establish a new principle by which the federal government would guarantee tax - exempt bonds sold by local agencies to develop mass transit facilities. The idea was opposed by the treasury.

The House wrote in a stiffer labor standards provision than did the Senate, but that, no doubt, will be acceptable to the Senate in this election year.

Otherwise, the two bills run parallel in scope and purpose. Both provide a 375-million-dollar federal grant program, which over a three-year period will assist local and state governments and public transit authorities in constructing new or improved mass transit facilities. No funds can go to a private operating company.

Loan programs would also be established, mainly under an extension of a program set up by Congress in 1961. The Senate bill also included a three-year, 30-million - dollar transit research and development that would probably be retained.

Grants would be distributed by the Housing and Home Finance Agency, under specific rules and regulations to be drawn up by Administrator Robert C. Weaver. The HHFA already has an office of transportation, which could assume the mass transit responsibility, at least temporarily.

Communities, states or public authorities that qualify for aid would apply to the administrator, outlining their specific needs. Under restrictions set forth by Congress, no state may receive more than 12.5 per cent, or 47 million dollars, of the total available.

The available funds, however, would be greater for transit projects that overlap into more than one state. Thus, the New York-New Jersey - Connecticut metropolitan area around New York City apparently would be eligible for bigger sums, if applied for through a tri-state transit authority.

The federal grants could be used directly for the extension or improvement of roadbed, commuter trains, new or modernized equipment, buses, stations or other such projects.

The federal portion would make up two-thirds of the capital costs of the project that could not be financed by fares. Thus, if a particular expansion program — say the purchase of new commuter cars—cost a total of five million dollars, of which two million dollars could be repaid through anticipated fares, then the federal government would supply two million dollars of the remaining balance.

No federal grants could be used to defray or subsidize operating costs. Ineligible would be such programs as the direct commuter subsidy now being paid by the City of Philadelphia to local rail lines to improve service and reduce fares.

Despite the historic approval of the mass transit bill, the controversy over whether this a proper area of federal participation will continue. The Republican policy committee, which came out "unalterably opposed" to the bill and took a rare beating by fellow House Republicans, can be expected to remain opposed.

This opposition could influence future attempts to step up the federal participation — at least until the success or failure of the recently-passed program becomes clear.

Most transit authorities agree that the 375 million dollars provided under the plan will hardly be more than a beginning. Already there is talk of additional funds that will be needed to carry out a mass transit improvement program on an adequate scale.

Austin Tobin, executive director of the New York Port Authority, recently estimated that more than four billion dollars will be required for expansion of rapid transit systems alone. Included is almost two billion dollars which he said is desperately needed for expansion, extension and new equipment in New York, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland and Philadelphia.

In addition, whole new rapid transit systems—to cost 2.4 billion dollars—will be required soon in Philadelphia, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Atlanta and Washington, D.C.

Metropolitan areas are growing so fast — and bringing increased problems of commuter transportation—that by 1980 more than 40 cities in the United States will have populations over one million persons, Tobin warned.

License Sought

SACRAMENTO (CNS) — The Contractors' State License board today announced it will issue a general engineering contractor's license to Kenneth W. Philo, 21 St. Francis Lane, San Rafael, on or after July 16, unless written protest is filed.

NO, I WON'T COME OUT!

Marin's Booming Subdivisions Keep Spreading

Subdivisions, subdivisions and more subdivisions continue almost as far as the eye can see, nearly to the Marin-Sonoma County line which is way off in the distance.

On the left side of the federal highway, beginning at the bottom of the picture and working up are Marinwood, Loma Verde, Rafael Village, Monte Marin and Marin Village.

Trees make the hills stand out in dark contrast. Ribbons of white across the ridges are firebreaks and fire roads.

This photo was taken prior to completion of the interchange at the junction of Highways 101 and 37. The way things are changing now, it's hard to keep up with the pace. The interchange now stands out from the air as a series of geometric clover leaves.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Opportunities Not Missed In Duplicate Tournaments

One of the reasons you will enjoy playing duplicate bridge is that good plays don't get lost quite so often.

In rubber bridge we tend to go on to the next hand without noticing what opportunities were missed. In a duplicate game somebody may see the opportunity.

Opening lead — ♣ 2

It's easy to see what would happen to this hand at rubber bridge. East's ten of clubs would drive out the ace at the first trick.

DRAW TRUMPS

South would draw trumps, cash the top diamonds and get to his hand with a trump to discard a club from dummy on the jack of diamonds. Then South would hold his breath and take the spade finesse.

The spade finesse works, as the cards lie, so South makes his slam. A new rubber would begin while East and West were still grumbling about South's luck.

If this hand were played in a strong club duplicate game, the same cards would be played at many tables. If one table saw the right defense, all the other defenders would hear about it and profit from the lesson.

INTELLIGENT PLAY

At one table, perhaps, the score would read 100 for East-West instead of 1430 for North-South. The other players would snort scornfully at the declarer who found a way to go down on an ice-cold hand.

And then they would discover that South had not thrown the hand away; it had been stolen from him by an intelligent play.

Go back to the first trick to see the proper defense. East should play the queen of clubs instead of the ten. Simple, and safe, but what a devastating play!

CAPTURES QUEEN

South captures the queen of clubs with the ace, of course, and then is ready to bet the crown jewels that West has the ten of clubs. He doesn't know who has the king of spades.

Naturally South bases his play on what he knows. He draws two rounds of trumps, cashes dummy's top diamonds, and gets to his hand with a trump to discard dummy's jack of spades on the jack of diamonds. Then he confidently leads a club to take the "proven" finesse of the nine of clubs.

East then takes his two club tricks, defeating the slam. It's hard to see how East can lose by his intelligent play at the first trick. It's easy to see how he gains 1530 points by it.

Answer: Bid one heart.

The hand is too strong for an opening bid of one notrump. You have a good 5-card suit as well as the maximum count of 18 points.

Murder Trial To Continue

Testimony in the Donald G. Corbett Jr. murder trial was recessed at noon yesterday for the weekend and is scheduled to resume in Marin Superior Court at 10 a.m. Monday.

Nearly two dozen witnesses for the prosecution have testified thus far, and more are expected next week. Defense attorneys said they have about 30 witnesses to follow.

Charged in the icepick slaying of Corbett in his Sausalito apartment March 27 are Robert Lee Jones and John Lee King.

Three Marin Youths Trek To Navy Camp

Three young Marin County men enlisted in the Navy and went last week to the Naval Training Center in San Diego for recruit training.

They are Edgar Franklin Palmer Jr., 17, son of retired Navy Chief and Mrs. Palmer of 140 Deer Hollow Road, Sleepy Hollow; John Charles Sharpley, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley L. Sharpley of 21 Marquad Avenue, San Rafael, and Bruce Richardson Carde, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Carde of 56 Bay View Avenue, Belvedere.

The Bald Cypress was designated the state tree of Louisiana by an act of the 1963 legislature.

Sewer Board Sets Hearing

San Rafael Sanitation District directors yesterday set a public hearing for 11 a.m. July 23 at city hall on the proposed extension of sewer lines on Altena Street.

Septic tanks in the area have reportedly become overloaded.

The directors also adopted a budget for fiscal 1964-65 of $308,780. The budget can be financed with the existing 39-cent tax.

Councilman Fred E. Jensen and Mayor John F. McInnis conducted yesterday's session. The third member, Supervisor Byron W. Leydecker, was absent.

Voice Of America To Broadcast On Guide Dog Story

The story of San Rafael's Guide Dogs for the Blind will be told on Voice of America.

The 15-minute program was taped by Clarence Hillman, local representative of Voice of America. He interviewed William F. Johns, executive director of the school; Harrison Alper of San Carlos, a graduate of the school, and Lawrence Rees, director of training.

Time for the broadcast is not yet known, but local listeners will not have a chance to hear it, anyway. Voice of America does not reach the United States and Canada.

Stereo Hi-Fi

By. C. J. Catania
Audio Engineer

How far apart should the stereo speakers be? Should they be on opposite walls? Can they be installed in ceilings? Can one speaker be installed high, and the second one installed near the floor? These are questions commonly asked by the do-it-yourself stereo enthusiast.

There is no definite rule on how far apart the stereo speakers should be. This distance depends on the size of the room in which they will be used, and on where the seating is in relation to the speakers. For small rooms in the 12 foot by 15 foot vicinity, and where the listeners are generally 8 to 10 feet from the speakers, the speakers should be placed along the same wall and from 6 to 9 feet apart. The exact placement will depend on the seating arrangement. In general, the speakers should not be so far apart that the listener is aware of a lack of music coming from the area between the speakers. This is called a "gap in the middle." At the other extreme, they should not be so close together that all of the instruments blend together and seem to come from one small spot on the wall; thus losing the stereo effect.

Why along one wall? If you place a speaker along one wall and place the second speaker along the opposite wall, the listener is forced to be between the two speakers. This will have the same effect as placing half of the musicians on one side of the room and the other half on the other side, with the audience or listeners in the middle. A very unnatural situation. When the performers of a small combo or chamber group are split, the situation is even worse. By arranging the speakers properly along one wall, you are in affect placing the orchestra or combo or chamber group along that wall as would be done if they were really present.

As to ceiling installations, this is not a practical placement for stereo. If two speakers were spaced in the ceiling for stereo, the listener would get the sensation that the orchestra was located in an upper balcony. Again not a natural placement of the orchestra with relation to the listener.

In many installations, the room decor is such that a shelf mounted or built-in speaker on one side be located 6 to 7 feet up from the floor, and that the second speaker be mounted at floor level. Our built-in radar type hearing is fairly sensitive in pin-pointing sound in a horizontal plane, but not very sensitive in localizing small differences in a vertical plane. The verticle separation will not be very noticeable, and the stereo separation will not be lost, so this type of speaker placement is satisfactory.

San Rafael's Big Celebration

Parade, Baseball, Barbecue And Lots Of Noise Marked The Fourth In The Early Days

(Editor's Note: William T. Ortman came to San Rafael as a boy in 1900 with his parents to make his home. He was reared in San Rafael, educated here and spent his early manhood in Marin. Now residing in Oakland, he has written a series of recollections of early days in San Rafael for the Independent-Journal's Marin Magazine.)

By W. T. ORTMAN

It could have been that the San Rafael of the turn of the century was a bit more zealous in its celebration of the Fourth of July than are the Marinites of today. Certainly, we were noisier.

In looking back, I can still remember our excitement as we boys anticipated the coming of the great day. There was very little sleep the night prior to the Fourth. And at the crack of dawn, we were up and out of bed.

With my clothing under one arm, I would steal downstairs and dress in the kitchen. Then I would slip out the back door and head for town.

EVEN AT that early hour, activities had already begun. I could hear the rattle of smaller firecrackers, the occasional ear-splitting detonations of a giant cannon cracker. All this racket was coming from C Street. San Rafael's "Chinatown" was up and celebrating the emancipation of the human race from foreign despotism, for no one values his freedom more than a Chinese.

The east side of C Street between Third and Fourth was a continuous roar and crackle of noise and the flash of light through the thick smoke.

And as always, there was more than a few of us Occidental kids on hand to aid the Chinese in the creation of the din.

ON THIS day of days, the Chinese merchant abandoned all thoughts of profit. Enthusiastically and recklessly, he discharged his own merchandise in his noisy tribute to the great holiday.

Then, although the hour for the start of the parade was still more than an hour off, the various units began assembling at E and Fourth. Along E, the parade participants soon extended back as far as Second. Other divisions of the procession stood in formation on E in the other direction and on past the Robert Dollar home. Still other entries formed on Fourth westward as far as F.

From the buildings, flags languished in the heat as midday approached. From building to building across Fourth Street, red, white and blue bunting was strung all the way down to Irwin and what was then called "the broad-gauge district."

AT 11 A.M., the parade finally started. Several old Civil War muzzle-loading cannon down in the marsh fired the salute that signaled the start of the spectacle. And all the time, the rattle and bang of firecrackers continued.

On this particular Fourth, Steve Richardson was the parade's grand marshal, flanked on both sides by deputies on prancing Arabians as they moved at the head of the long line.

Steve, astride a cow pony, wore a battered felt hat with broad rim, soft cotton shirt, denim trousers belted at the waist by a worn cartridge belt to which was hung a holstered revolver, might not have been television's idea of the westerner of 60 years ago. But he was the real thing. Dark complexioned, with a small white chin beard, he was the son of Capt. William Richardson, grantee of the immense Saucelito Rancho, and he was a constant riding companion of his father's vaqueros, roping and rounding up cattle and living in the open.

BEHIND THE grand marshal and his deputies came the mayor, then Henry Gieske, and his board of trustees, riding in an open carriage drawn by two black horses. And next in line were other dignitaries such as Sheriff William Taylor, Judge Thomas J. Lennon and Thomas P. Boyd in similar conveyances.

Now came the San Rafael band of 35 musicians. And in their wake, marching smartly, Company D of the Fifth Regiment, many of its members veterans of the Spanish-American War. Capt. Newell Vanderbilt was at the head of the Guardsmen, while First Lt. Joe Barrows led the First Platoon. The crowd gave the passing men in uniform a special cheer, for San Rafael was fond of its soldier boys.

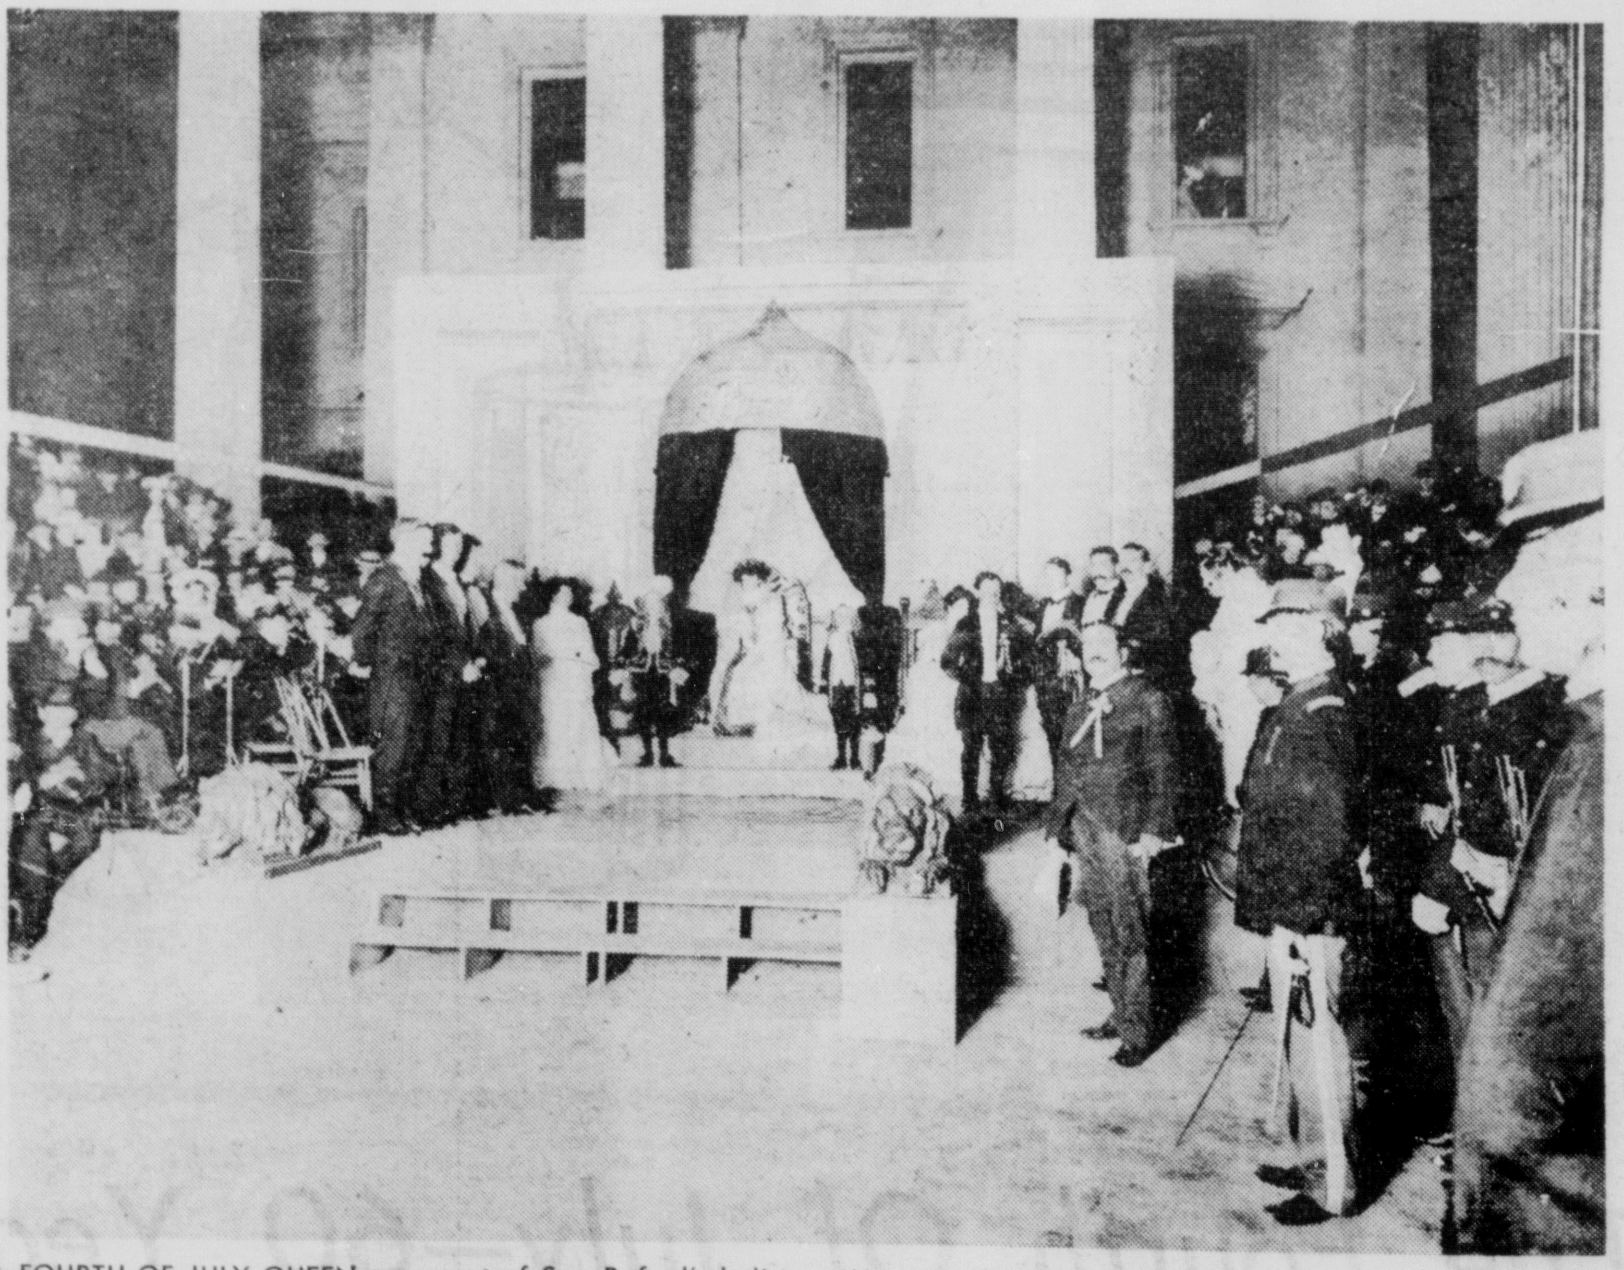

After Company D, it was the San Rafael Fire Department with the fire laddies in their red shirts and shining helmets, marching two abreast and pulling their hose cart—old No. 1.

THE COVER

IT WAS the noisiest day of the year — the Fourth of July in San Rafael at the turn of the century, as recalled on these pages by early-day resident William T. Ortman. Taking the lead in creating the din were the Chinese residents of the community. But they had plenty of help from the town's small boys. Artist Eleanor Jacobsen has recreated a scene of about 1900 in her sketch for the cover of this issue of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine.

It Was The Biggest Day Of The Year

San Rafael Went All Out In Observing The Fourth

Fire Chief Marty Johansen was in command.

ON AND ON came the parade. There were the cadets from Mount Tamalpais Military Academy. California dons in Spanish attire astride beautiful horses. The band and cadets of Hitchcock Military Academy. The Fourth of July queen and her attendants rode in splendor on a flower-covered float. Mounted units clattered past.

With horns blaring, people shouting, cannons still booming, the parade moved down to the east side of town, turning north at Lincoln, then west on Fifth. At Lootens Place the parade came to a halt and disintegrated as participants merged with the onlookers and moved toward the pear orchard back of the Army Hall to partake of the barbecued oxen.

The beef plus pork and lamb lay in a 50-foot-long trench filled with hot rocks and fiery coals of oak wood. Each carcass cut in quarters was supported on cross rods of iron, and sizzled and spit grease into the flaming pit. The cooking meat sent forth a savory fragrance that blended perfectly with chili beans stewing in huge iron cauldrons near the serving tables.

THEN THERE was the aroma of East India coffee in 30-gallon galvanized cans to tantalize human appetites and even lure the bees from their pollen-gathering duties in the pear trees and neighboring flower gardens.

The day was warm, but the people pouring into the picnic grounds were in a happy holiday mood. There were no tables or chairs. But family groups soon found places on the ground. Women made the arrangements, while men hurried off to stand in the chow line before the long serving counter. The tables making up the counter were piled high with platters of cut meat and sliced bread.

To add to the spirit of festivity, the San Rafael band came marching onto the grounds, blaring out "There'll be a hot time in the old town tonight . . ."

BY 2 P.M. THE celebrators were filled to the ears with beef, beans and bread. Now they began to drift toward the ballpark at Fourth and Irwin.

It was a noisy crowd, bent on fun, that filled the grandstand and overflowed along the base lines. There were noisemakers and shouting, but no firecrackers were permitted inside the ballpark.

The San Rafael battery for the day: Lichtenberg and Taylor. The opposing nine—the San Francisco Police Department team.

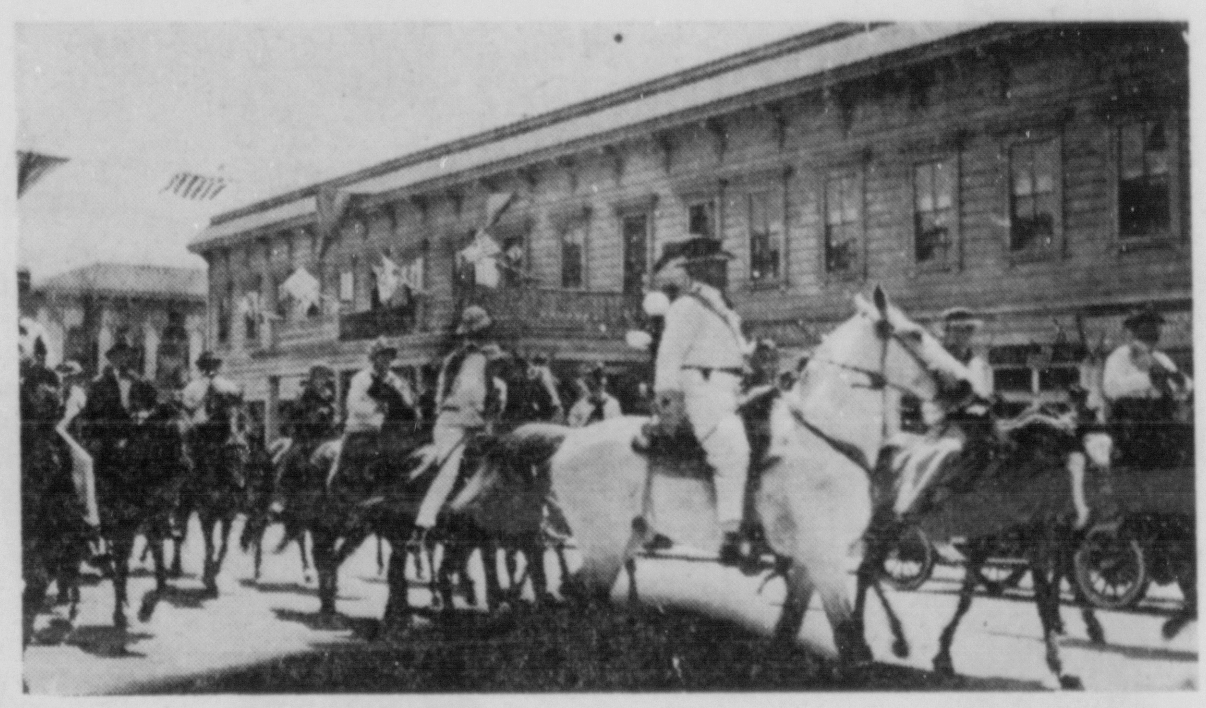

It was on a Fourth of July that San Rafael idol Rudy Lichtenberg pitched a 14-inning no-hit game. In the last of the 14th, Billy Taylor, on base, stole his way to third. Lichtenberg was at bat, and he singled to right field to drive home Taylor with the winning run.

BEDLAM followed among the fans. Spectators swarmed onto the field and carried a somewhat embarrassed Lichtenberg on their shoulders from the field.

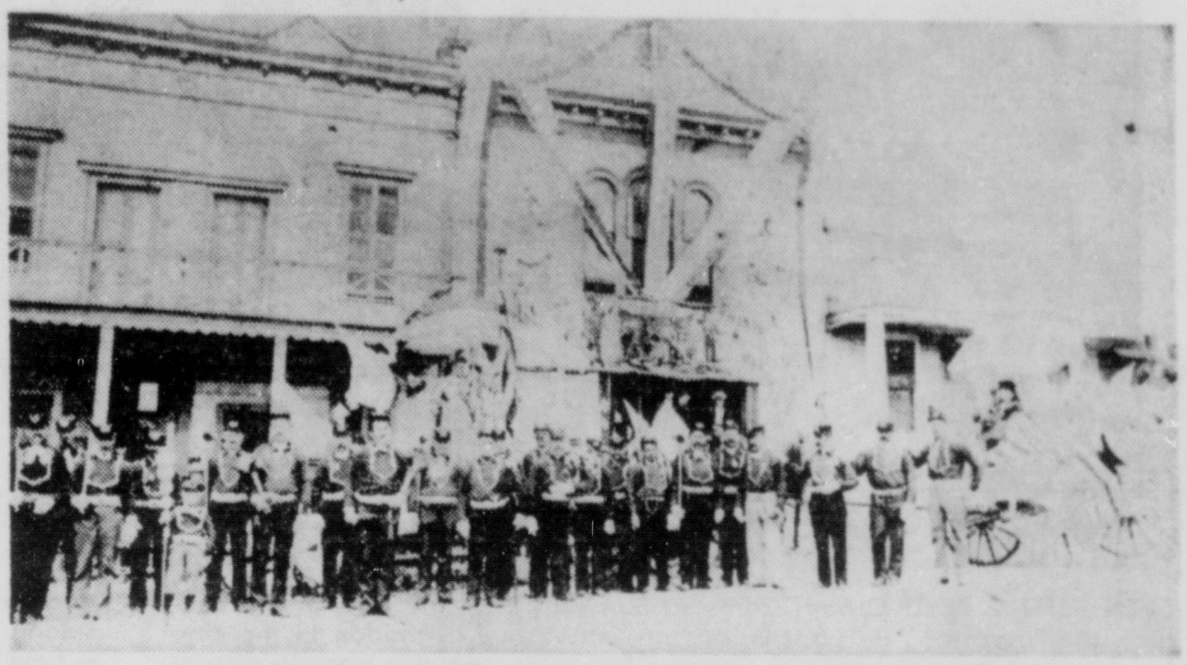

As the sun was going down behind the hills, the weary merrymakers were making their way to their homes for evening meals. But then they gathered once again, for the grand ball at the armory. It was the day of the "Gibson girl," hair arranged high in pompadour fashion on the head. And the women of the town took full advantage of the opportunity to display their newest, finest gowns.

At a few minutes before 9

EVEN BEFORE W. T. Ortman came to San Rafael at the turn of the century, the Fourth of July parade was an established institution in the city. Independent-Journal historian Florence Donnelly says this parade picture was taken in about 1885, and shows Fourth Street between B and C streets. On the corner where Crocker-Citizens National Bank now stands was a livery stable, next to a small office and just beyond Grosjean's was a livery stable, next to it a small office and just beyond Grosjean's story buildings with small business offices on the ground floor, living quarters above. At the corner was the Kappenmann Building, with a saloon on the lower floor. The Kaehler-Farrar Building, newly-constructed, is now located there. Seen in foreground of the photo are Civil War and other service veterans. The parade queen rode in a flower-covered float. The boy in the background riding a pony was the late Robert H. Menzies. His family presented the picture to the Marin County Historical Society. The hotel verandah, to be seen at extreme right, collapsed when overcrowded during one such parade.

o'clock, the grand march began to form. Escorts hurried about, seeking their dance partners. And at 9 sharp, the grand march began with Captain Vanderbilt in the lead with his pretty companion in white chiffon and glittering jewels. The promenaders circled the hall, then came down the center of the auditorium and divided, the gentlemen to the right and the ladies to the left. The auditorium was circled again and the partners met near the orchestra stand. And as the column again came up the center of the hall, the musicians switched from the military march they had been playing to a dreamy waltz. The grand promenade broke up, and couples began to glide slowly over the dance floor.

IT WAS not until 1 in the morning that the weary musicians finally were permitted to play "Home Sweet Home" indicating the end of the ball.

Then another Fourth of July was officially over.

We kids had long been in our beds by then. But much as we regretted the passing of the Fourth, there was some consolation in knowing that there would be other Fourths of July in the years to come with more fireworks, parades, barbecues and baseball games.

"Cotton Is Modern," Says Local Cleaner

In Grandmother's day cottons were often considered almost as rugged as muslin — and cotton garments got a good, hard scrubbing on the washboard when they were soiled.

But so many of today's cotton clothes are much more delicately colored and neatly tailored. "They would go limp as a wash rag with Grandmother's washboard treatment." In fact, modern cottons might even lose their carefully designed drape and fit if they are not treated with care.

That is probably why we receive more and more cotton dresses and sport shirts each year for drycleaning. "This is partly because cottons have gone 'high fashion' these days; but another reason people prefer to have their cottons drycleaned is that cleaners 'finish' to the fabric."

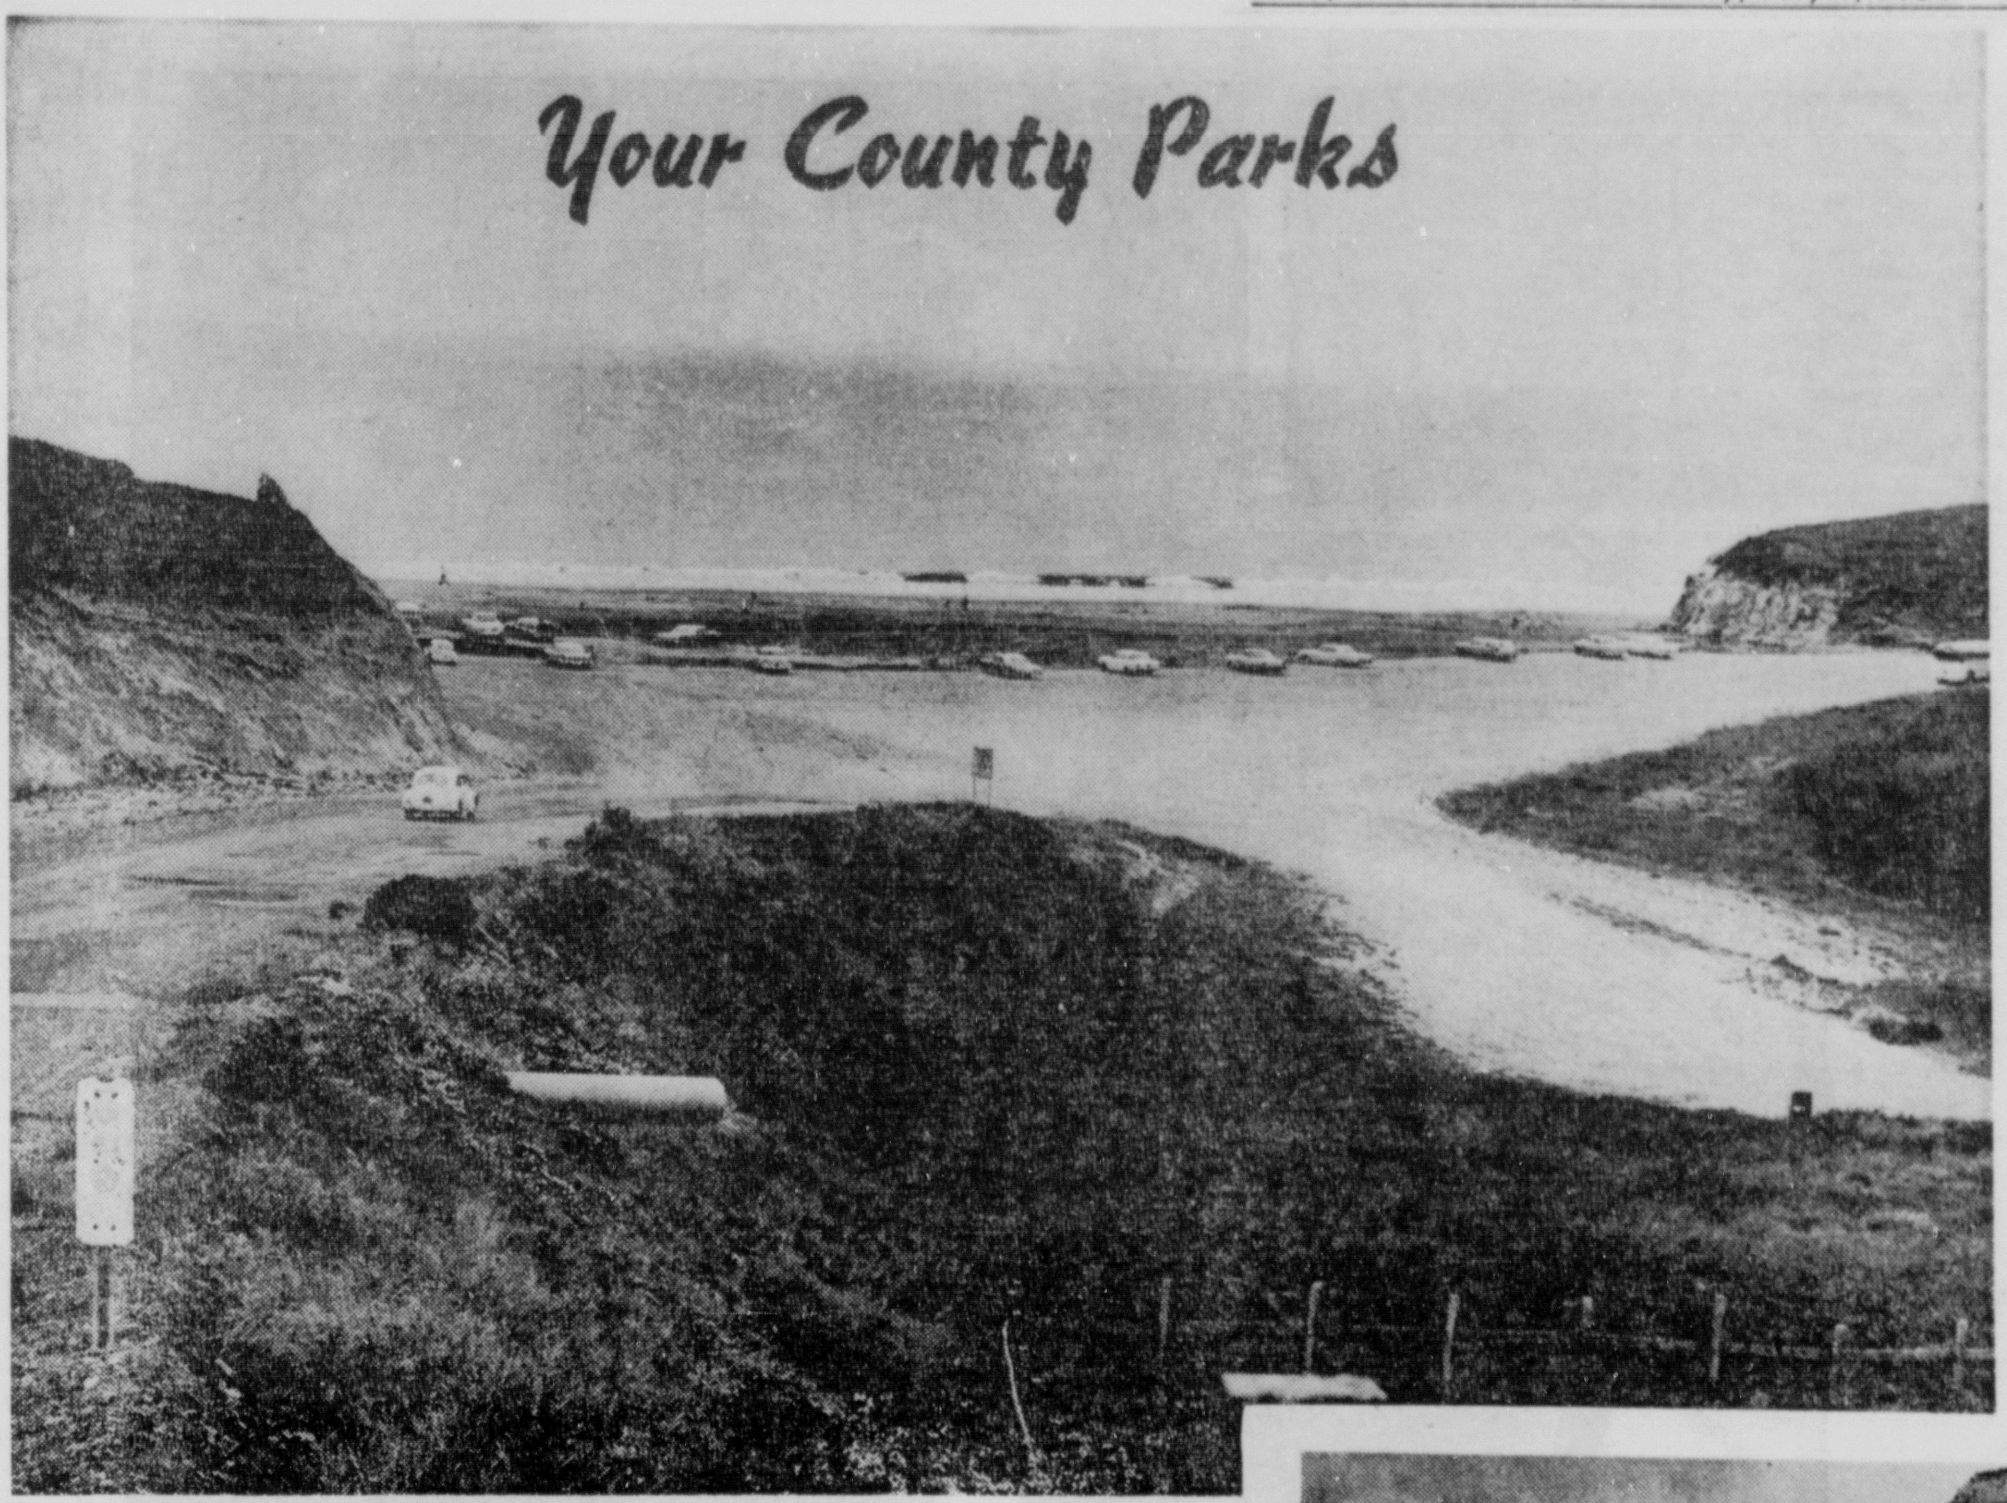

"Finish is a sizing additive that clothing manufacturers originally put in cotton garments to give the fabric body and luster. By restoring this finish, drycleaning retains the original appearance of today's modern cottons." By Robert & Ronald Casassa.

Your County Parks

THE PARKING AREA with ready access to the beach and surf is one of the improvements brought about by Marin County at its Drake's Beach County Park. The 54-acre park in West Marin contains some 725 feet of beach frontage. Soon, if all goes well, the park will become a part of the Pt. Reyes National Seashore. (Independent-Journal photos)

THE SANDY BEACH of Drake's Beach County Park is narrow, but there is a feeling of expanse and openness because of the spacious sweep and the grandeur of the nearby cliffs. It's a popular spot with picnickers.

Park With A History

Its Story Goes Back 385 Years

(Editor's Note: This is another in a series of Independent-Journal Marin Magazine articles on "Your County Parks," operated and maintained by the Marin County Parks and Recreation Department. Today's subject: The Drake's Beach Community Park).

By DON KEOWN

The year was 1579, and Francis Drake, daring skipper, intrepid explorer, but not yet a knight, was searching California's forbidding coastline for a safe harbor where his 70-foot-long Golden Hinde could be anchored and repaired.

Many historians, the members of the Drake Navigator's Guild foremost among them, insist that the place he ultimately selected was a sandspit inside the mouth of what has come to be known as Drake's Estero or Drake's Bay on the shores of West Marin.

A historical marker—a stone cross—stands today in a Marin County park near that sandspit, asserting West Marin's claim to its page in American history books.

FOR THE landing date, June 17, 1579, was a full 28 years before the founding of Jamestown and 41 years before the landing of the Pilgrim fathers aboard the Mayflower at Plymouth.

These historians who accept Drake's Estero as the landing place of the queen's captain and his men say that the English remained there 36 days while their ship was careened in the protection of the bay with its towering cliffs.

And that while the seafarers were taking advantage of the opportunity to refresh themselves from the rigors of the voyage, Drake's chaplain, his cousin Francis Fletcher, conducted on shore the first Episcopalian worship services to be help in what was to become the United States under the direction of an ordained minister. It also, very probably, marked the first such use of the English Bible in those wild lands.

Thus theologians have shared the interest of historians, amateur and professional alike, in the area.

HIS SHIP rehabilitated, his men rested, Drake then resumed his voyage, eventually to return to England where knighthood was bestowed upon him by Queen Elizabeth. And then to serve Queen "Bess" valorously in the destruction of the Spanish armada.

Drake's Beach County Park, in which the historical monument stands, has scenic and recreational values for the people of Marin as well.

The park consists of 54.25 acres, only four acres of which are land. The remainder consists of fresh water lake and reed-filled lagoon.

There is 725 feet of beach frontage.

DRAKE'S BAY, itself, has 15 miles of shoreline, and is formed by the projecting cliffs of Point Reyes and Double Point. At its DRAKE'S BEACH County Park visitors Lana Fillback and Lamont Mendenhall of Berkeley inspect with interest the historical monument commemorating the landing in 1579 of Francis Drake and his crew from the Golden Hinde upon the shores of West Marin. The landing place, as fixed by the Drake Navigator's Guild and supported by many historians, is now known as Drake's Estero or Drake's Bay. The monument was erected in 1946 by the Sir Francis Drake Assn. of California. Inscription can be seen in inset.

outside, the coastline is rocky and rugged, but it gradually offers a narrow strip of sandy beach as it sweeps in a curve around and past Limantour Bay.

There is a feeling of expanse and openness on the beach, despite its narrow width, because of the spacious sweep and the grandeur of the sheer cliffs that rise perpendicularly above it. These cliffs, which must have reminded Drake of his own beloved English coastline, protect the cove from prevailing winds and fog.

The fresh water lake or lagoon is about a quarter mile in length, an eighth of a mile in width. Tule grass forms the principal vegetative cover, with a small group of wind-swept cypress trees lending contrast in the background.

County-developed facilities to go with the attractions of nature and history include a parking area, picnic tables with refuse cans, two chemical toilets and dressing rooms for the swimmers.

The park site was purchased in 1938-39 with funds raised by popular subscription. The Marin Conservation League, various service clubs and interested individual citizens helped raise the thousands of dollars needed to purchase the 54-acres-plus, then presented it to Marin County for park purposes.

The historical marker was erected by the Sir Francis Drake Assn. of California in 1946 to commemorate the role the area had played in early American history.

ALL THIS time, the argument raged among both professional and amatuer historians. Where did Drake actually land? Several points along the California coast put in their claim. Included were such Marin localities as Point San Quentin, Keil Cove and Richardson Bay, as well as Drake's Bay.

In 1956, the Drake Navigator's Guild settled the question, at least to the satisfaction of the membership. The organization, composed of Drake students and enthusiasts, announced that after years of study, it had concluded that the strip of Marin coast inside the mouth of Drake's Estero was indeed the "white bankes and cliffes which lie toward to sea" as described in chronicles of the Drake voyage.

The finding has not silenced the controversy. But the stand of the navigators has received considerable support among scholars.

AND THE plaque on the monument along the West Marin shoreline states without equivocation: "In commemoration of the landing of Francis Drake

H. M. S. 'Golden Hinde' upon these shores June 17, 1579 . . ."

The future status of Drake's Beach County Park is in a state of flux, and the area may not remain a part of the county system much longer. Landscaping plans, as prepared by the county planning staff, were scrapped when the Pt. Reyes National Seashore was established.

It was apparent that, logically, the county park should ultimately become a part of the national seashore surrounding it. Negotiations to effect that change are under way. At issue is the price, if any, to be paid the county by the federal government for the property.

IN THE meantime, the park continues under county supervision. And recreation-seekers along with students of history, flock there, especially on pleasant weekends.

Located approximately 10½ miles from Inverness, the park is reached by turning left on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard at Inverness. Directional signs point the way.

From Highway 101, turn left to Highway 1 at Tamalpais Valley Junction, continue 12½ miles to Stinson Beach and on north along Route 1 to Inverness.

OR THE Panoramic Highway can be followed to Highway 1 at Stinson Beach, and then continue as above.

Sir Francis Drake Boulevard can be taken through Fairfax past Samuel P. Taylor State Park to Olema. Turn right on on Route 1, and continue two miles to Inverness turnoff.

Via Nicasio, turn off 101 at Lucas Valley turn-off, and at the Nicasio reservoir, join the Point Reyes-Petaluma Road to Pt. Reyes Station and Inverness.

From Novato, travel west on Novato Boulevard past Stafford Lake. Turn left on Pt. Reyes-Petaluma Road and continue as above.

IN THE spring months, those making the trip will find themselves passing some of the world's most beautiful wildflower fields.

From the shore they can watch boating in the bay, some of the craft still powered by the same winds that drove Drake's Golden Hinde.

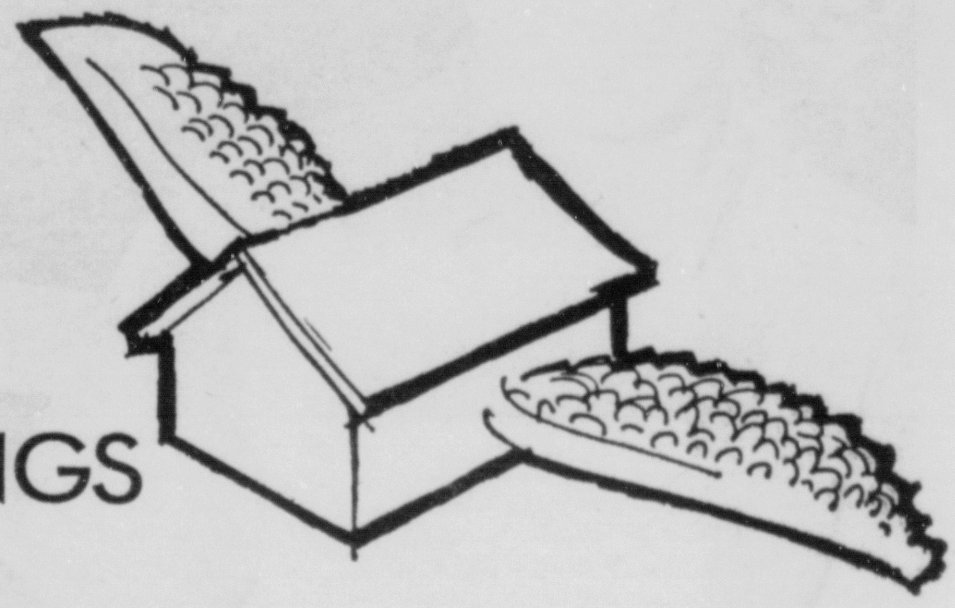

They may want to take advantage of state park facilities at Tomales Bay and Taylor Park while in West Marin.

And most certainly, they will want to reflect upon the indomitable spirit of the sea captain who was small in physical stature but tall in courage. And whose men found upon these shores the same atmosphere of peace and relaxation that pleasure-seekers today enjoy — 385 years later.

Pigs And Pens In The Backyard

Novato Youth Proves His Point: Swine Are Not Dirty Animals

Why should a "city boy" suddenly take up raising pigs as a hobby?

And how does a homemaker feel about pigs living in her back yard?

It takes a lot of explaining, but Ralph Worden, 14, who will enter Novato High School this fall, has the answers.

Ralph, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Worden, 2135 Vineyard Road, just outside of Novato, is the fellow who has handled the problem of raising pigs in a suburban setting.

HE'S AIMING for a first-place trophy in the Sonoma-Marin Fair, which opens Thursday in Petaluma for a four-day run, now, and that's where the story begins to unfold.

Fair Manager Arthur F. Canavan started to wonder how a youngster goes about raising pigs in a suburban environment.

A visit to the Worden house answered all questions.

A LOVELY ranch-style home greets the eyes upon arrival.

Actually, the Worden home with its yard of approximately an acre lies outside the Novato city limits, in unincorporated Marin. But the city's boundaries are just across the street. And the well-populated surroundings are distinctly residential and not an area in which one would expect to find ham on the hoof.

And there's no hint of livestock around the Worden house. Even the nose cannot detect a sign.

Ralph has been raising pigs for about three years.

"When this hits the papers," Mrs. Worden says, "our neighbors will probably howl. Many of them don't even know we have pigs in the back yard."

Ralph keeps his pigs penned

POSING PROUDLY with his 350-pound sow is Ralph Worden, 14-year-old Novato 4-H Club member. Ralph will be entering the animal in the Sonoma-Marin Fair which opens in Petaluma next Thursday and runs for four days, hopeful that she'll win for him a blue ribbon. A number of other young Marin exhibitors will also be competing in the show which offers the excitement and color of the old-time county fair.

in a stockade area. Right now, there's a sow and two market pigs, plus a litter of seven piglets.

"I GOT talked into it by my friend," Ralph explains. "He has a farm not far from here. I got interested in animals and he asked me if I wanted to raise pigs."

So Ralph did . . . and mom didn't say a thing.

"I didn't think it would stick. It seemed farfetched," Mrs. Worden says.

But it did. Ralph joined the Novato Aggies, a 4-H Club. He's been showing for a couple of years and has won "second group" ribbons at the Junior Grand Nationals.

HE CARES for the pens himself and cleans the animals.

Disputing commonly-held public opinion, Ralph says a pig is a clean animal. "They don't like to be dirty. They keep their pens clean and actually are uncomfortable when filthy."

The Wordens also have two horses. The pigs are all Ralph's, but the horses belong to the family. Shirley, 16, Chris, 9, and Alan, 2, like to ride the horses, so they pitch in and care for them.

There aren't many pig-raisers in Marin County. Ralph could only name a handful of colleagues.

BUT HE'S taking his prize sow, all 350 pounds of her, and gunning for a first place in the largest junior agricultural show in Northern California, the Sonoma-Marin Fair.

He's also excited about seeing Doug McClure, star of the television series "The Virginian" and "Checkmate." The young TV star will be at the Petaluma fair July 11 and 12, all day to meet fairgoers.

The Miss Sonoma-Marin Counties contest begins the fair next Thursday night. The Friday night feature will include top-flight entertainment, including the Dillards from the Andy Griffith show.

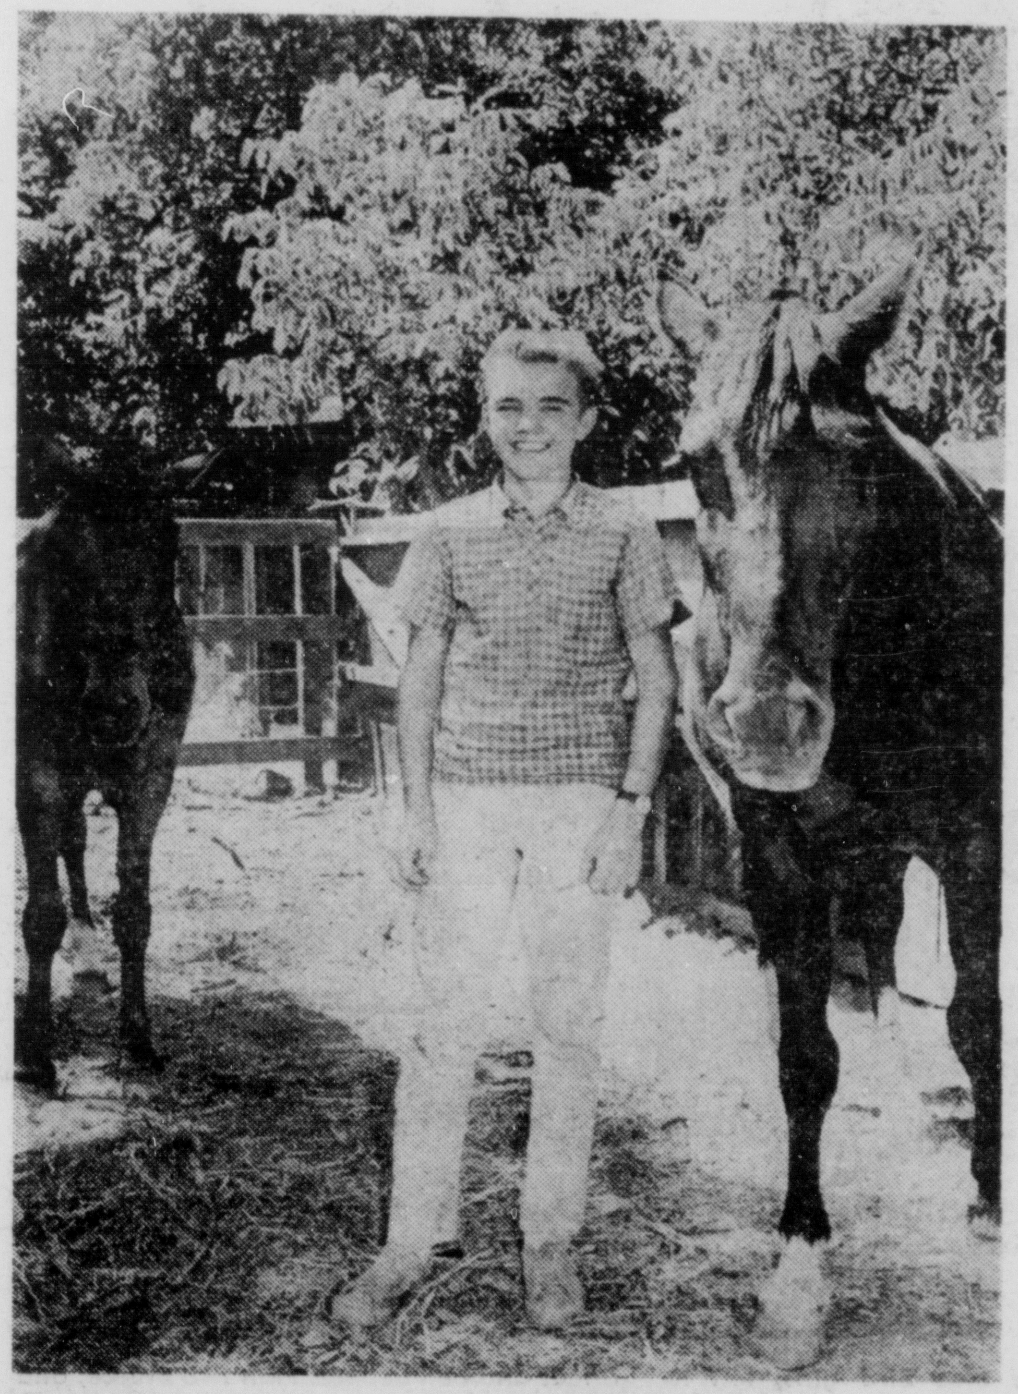

Saturday night, the rodeo comes to town and on Sunday night, the hardtops roll.

ALL DAY long there will be entertainment on the grounds, plus the hundreds of exhibitors, carnival and livestock competition which makes the Sonoma-Marin event a family event in the tradition of the old-time country fair.

It will be compiete for Ralph Worden if his sow can just win that coveted trophy.

THIS CUTE LITTLE piglet is one of a litter of seven now owned by young Ralph Worden. Ralph defends his animals against their detractors who disdain swine as "dirty," claiming that they are really very clean animals. His own pens and animals are kept scrupulously clean.

HORSES ARE another animal to be found along with Ralph Worden's pigs at the Worden home at 2135 Vineyard Road, Novato. But while the swine are Ralph's possessions and responsibility, the two horses are shared by the other members of the family.

THERE'S NO OFFENSIVE odor coming from these pens, even though they do house hogs. Young Ralph Worden sees that they are kept clean and fresh. And that his animals are always carefully groomed. No pampered pet receives more painstaking care.

The Fourth Of July Is 'Cookout Time'

Camp Fire Girls Share Their Recipes For Your Enjoyment

Just about every day is cookout day in Marin County.

But the Fourth of July holiday weekend is the ideal time for the family barbecue or picnic—when food cooked over an outdoor fire has special appeal and appropriateness.

For the cookout is as American as the Fourth of July itself.

THAT'S WHY the Blue Birds, the Camp Fire Girls and their leaders in Marin County have chosen this particular weekend to pass along to you some of their favorite cookout recipes and secrets.

They'll be putting them to use this weekend.

Day camp programs were held this past week at Phoenix Lake, Ross, and Stafford Dam, Novato. Those events will be climaxed this coming week by an overnight camping trip at Samuel P. Taylor State Park for the Camp Fire and junior high school girls.

More day camp sessions will open July 20 at Deer Park, Fairfax, and Paradise Beach County Park, Tiburon.

In the pictures on these pages you'll see them and their leaders preparing turkey "emu" or Polynesian style, cherry cobbler, doughboys, plank steak, chicken on a spit, some "hobo stove" magic, jiffy spaghetti, two-man casserole, K-bobs, and dessert S'mores.

The directions:

Banana boat: With sharp knife, slit one banana, insert two marshmallows and two pieces chocolate. Wrap, skin and all, in heavy foil. Heat over low coals, about three to five minutes.

Mock angel food cake: Cube unsliced day-old bread. Dip in condensed milk, roll in cocoanut. Poke on stick, roast over coals.

Bird seed: Fill one plastic bag with equal amounts unsalted peanuts, M and Ms, sugared cereal, raisins. Perfect for hikes, gives quick energy, but not too "thirstifying." Eat by the handsful.

A TEPEE FIRE is ideal for roasting wieners or marshmallows on a stick. Fourth graders Jo Ann Fogel, Judy Stanley and Barbara Lee Hughes of the Snah Nah Me Wah Camp Fire group build their first such fire. Next year they will learn more intricate outdoor cooking arrangements as they prepare their own food at Camp Fire day camp cookouts.

Foil stew: Fill squares of heavy duty foil with one serving of hamburger, chopped onion, carrots, potatoes. Close tightly. Identify with nail polish symbols on packages. Cook over coals 10 minutes each side.

Angel on horseback: Two squares of dry bread are sandwiched over matching squares of cheese, then wrapped with bacon strips. Put on pointed stick. Bake over coals, turning until just right.

CALL IT "two-man casserole" or "one-pot meal," it's a Boy Scout recipe that the Camp Fire Girls have adapted to female tastes. Needed: One old-fashioned one-pound coffee can with lid and one No. 10 can — and heavy gloves. In coffee can, put sliced onions. Add a half pound of hamburger and top with sliced carrots and potatoes. Season, then cover with lid. Make tiny pin holes for escaping steam. Mix biscuit dough with dry onion mix and water. Shape like dough. Grease lid and top with dough. Set can on low-burning coals and cover with the No. 10 can. Put more coals on top. Check biscuit in 10 minutes. Cooks in half an hour. (Photos by Gerrie Reichard)

AT LEFT, it's dessert time and San Rafael junior high Camp Fire Girls Kathy Pattaluchi, Peggy Waterbury and Midge Upshaw prepare S'mores. They start with Graham crackers, chocolate squares and toasted marshmallows. Hot, toasted marshmallows are placed on top of chocolate which in turn has been set on the cracker. This is topped with a second cracker. Additional photos and cookout recipes on pages M-12 and M-13.

Cookout Tips From The Camp Fire Girls

THESE CAMP FIRE GIRLS are demonstrating for you how they make breadsticks or "doughboys." Stir biscuit mix and water right in the box, or, for small groups, measured amount can be mixed in plastic bag. Stir with stick until stiff enough to handle. Shape on the end of greased rounded stick — broomsticks are perfect. Cook about six inches above coals, turning often until brown. Remove from stick and stuff with jam or a cooked wiener. Bread twists can be made the same way. The girls are, left to right, Pamela Beatty, Debbie Cole, Carolisa Lindberg and Natasha Nelson.

THE "DOUGHBOYS," begun at left, have reached the "damp dough" stage and are being shaped on a stick here by Marion Lewis and Linda Lammus. The process continues at right.

"A LITTLE GOOEY, perhaps," Camp Fire Girls Diane Smith and Marilyn Rhoads decide, but the "doughboy" cooked over the fire on a stick will taste good regardless. It's ready for the eating and the girls are hungry.

BOY SCOUT Executive Director Paul Dunn, also section chairman in charge of Camp Fire Girls training, demonstrates how Polynesians roast turkey. He digs hole 18 inches deep, lines it with rocks, builds roaring fire, adds more rocks and keeps it hot for an hour or until rocks are white hot. Excess rock and ashes are then shoveled out. A 15-pound turkey "oven ready" has been stuffed with bread and mushrooms, seasoned thoroughly, covered with sliced onion, carrots, potatoes, bay leaf and extra dash of sage, then double wrapped in heavy foil. Meat is placed in coals, covered with more hot rocks and charcoal, then topped with dirt until no smoke is visible. Place kettle of water on top as safety first measure. Cooking time: Three hours. At right, Dunn brings up his turkey.

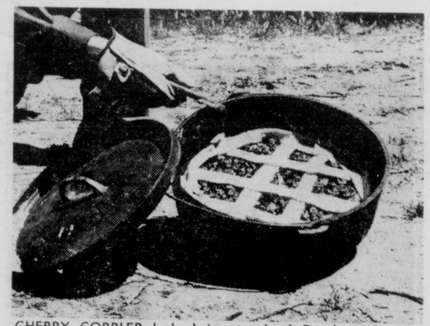

THE POPULAR "hobo stove" is demonstrated by Mrs. John Polach, Redwood District group organizer. This is back side, and note holes punched with beer can opener at top of can. Front has been cut with tin snips for opening big enough to fit tuna can. For fuel, cut strips of corrugated cardboard half inch narrower than height of can and roll loosely into spiral. Fill can a bit below height of paper with melted candle or canning parafin, permitting it to harden before using. Wear gloves for handling cans and have rock or empty can handy to extinguish flame.

PLANK STEAK, a long-time favorite on the cookout, begins with a little carpentry work before the cooking can begin. In photo above, Roslyn Schirmer, Patricia Mallory and Gretchen Walford, all three Horizon Club members who attend Redwood High School, use a log for a work table as they hammer nails through the meat, fixing it to their planks in preparation for cooking. At left, the well charcoaled steak, easy as pie. Essential to success is the selection of a tender cut of meat. Try a one-inch cut of sirloin — or a filet slice of fish. Grease the hard board before nailing the meat to it, prop it up against sand, log or rock near the coals for reflected heat. Cook to suit taste — the Camp Fire Girls, as you can see, prefer their's well done. Serve with French bread. If the board is a permanent part of your camping equipment, drill holes and whittle sharp pegs to fit. Then use again and again. (Photos by Gerrie Reichard)

CHERRY COBBLER baked in standard Dutch oven over outdoor fire is delicious. Mix up pie crust, cook slightly in covered oven, then fill with prepared pie cherries. Make simple crisscross, and cover. Set on coals, put more coals on lid, and cook for 15 minutes.

ROAST CHICKEN on a spit requires only the poking of a one-inch willow through fowl, neck to back, then tie with stout cord or thin wire. Season thoroughly. For added touch, wrap with bacon strips and lemon slices. Cook over hunter's fire one hour, turning frequently.

HERE'S THE finished turkey as cooked in the pit in the two photos above, tender enough to be eaten with your fingers.

THE HOBO STOVE is used here for bacon and eggs. Or for "hole-in-one": Grease top of stove, brown one side of bread slightly, cut out center, turn and break egg into hole. Cook until done. Hamburgers and pancakes are also ideal hobo stove products. Be sure to grease each time.

History & Travel

THE GREAT GATES by Marshall Sprague, Little, Brown and Co., 456 pages, $7.50. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"The Great Gates," sub-titled, "The Story of the Rocky Mountain Passes," is a sort of combination history-travelogue.

Author Marshall Sprague, a Coloradan, obviously knows the passes of the Rockies and the roads that run over them. His book has interest for both the tourist and the student of western history.

The reader is likely to get lost among the mountains — as the explorers who found the passes often did. To enjoy "The Great Gates," one should not attempt to keep oriented: that is probably hopeless. One should just wander mentally among the snowy peaks and rock crags that line both sides of the Continental Divide, leaving it to Sprague to find the way.

If the reader decides he'd like to explore some of the passes after reading about them, the book contains a complete listing of the passes—on both sides of the Canadian border — with road directions and descriptions.

Story Of Slavery

MR. LINCOLN'S PROCLAMATION by Frank Donovan, Dodd, Mead and Co., 142 pages, $4. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"Mr. Lincoln's Proclamation" is sub-titled "The Story of the Emancipation Proclamation." Actually, however, it is much more than that.

The proclamation, in its first tentative form, is not reached until the fourth of the book's six chapters. The first three, which take up just over half the book, trace the history of slavery and the slavery question in America from 1619 into the Civil War.

This is scarcely a virgin field, but author Frank Donovan has plowed an uncommonly straight furrow through it. In 74 pages, he succeeds in describing the wheres, hows and whys of Negro slavery in our country with far greater clarity than many more noted historians have been able to achieve in much more lengthy treatises.

Of the proclamation itself, Donovan notes (as has many another) that its legality was highly questionable and that it did not itself set any slave free, since it was applied to those in states which did not recognize the authority of its author. But he notes (as some others have failed to note) the significance of its two key words: "forever free."

Donovan (an ex-advertising copy writer) felt obliged to preface his work with an "explanation" in which he says the book's purpose is "not to downgrade the Great Emancipator." He need not have done this, and it strikes a false note.

Abraham Lincoln emerges from Donovan's account in full stature, as a master politician who used political means to achieve great moral goals, whereas those who followed him sacrificed the moral goals for cheap political ends.

The Dermatologists

1001 QUESTIONS & ANSWERS TO YOUR SKIN PROBLEMS by Dr. Sidney J. Robbins, Dr. Stephanie H. Robbins and Samm Sinclair Baker, Harper & Row, 308 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Maxine Keown.

With an assist from writer Samm Sinclair Baker, two New York City dermatologists have put down on paper the answers to some of the skin problem questions which they have most frequently encountered during 30 years of practice.

The question-and-answer format, when extended to 308 pages, does not make for the most readable book. But unquestionably, it is a comprehensive work. And the reputations of the Doctors Robbins, husband and wife, is such that their conclusions must be regarded as authoritative.

You will find many of your old beliefs dispelled, many new skin care ideas implanted and your knowledge in the field generally broadened.

Many a troubled teen-ager will find the chapter on acne alone worth the price of the book, although it is only fair to note that a personal consultation with a local dermatologist is still the best answer to such problems. Even such a detailed book can serve only as a general guide.

Fashion Advice

Too often today's "glamour girls" feel called upon to write books of advice in fields in which they are totally unqualified, relying upon their names to produce sales that the contents cannot justify.

It is to professional model Candy Jones' credit that she has not strayed from the field in which she is knowledgeable and qualified to comment.

"Look Your Best" is a book of advice for women, mostly for young women, about how they can best capitalize upon clothing fashions so as to look their best. Along with wardrobe problems, make-up and figure control are also discussed.

Generally, Miss Jones' comments are practical, her preferences leaning toward that which is smart but simple. And she is wise enough to give proper consideration to the price factor.

Some Recommended Books For The Young Readers

Some recommended books for the young, younger and youngest readers:

The Monitor and the Merrimac are familiar names to every young history student. Although not the first armored ships, they were the first to do battle with each other. Frank R. Donovan has written the story of the clash that marked the end of the era of wooden warships, and of other naval warfare that followed, for American Heritage's fine Junior Library series. "Ironclads of the Civil War" ($3.95) contains 121 illustrations, 48 in color. Famed historian Bruce Catton served as consultant to author Donovan. And the result is an excellent account of a colorful and crucial phase in the war between the states that has been receiving increased attention in the 1960s.

Another quality American Heritage series for young students of history is its "Horizon Caravel" books which range beyond America's frontiers for their subjects. "Marco Polo's Adventures in China" by Milton Rugoff is a colorful entry in that series. Rugoff tells the story of the Venetian merchant who traveled 5,000 miles to marvel at the wonders of Oriental civilizations far more advanced in the 13th century than that of Europe. As with all these books, illustrations are lavish and instructive and include reproductions of some of the world's great paintings and artifacts from Marco Polo's time. Like Junior Library books, Horizon Caravel volumes sell for $3.95 and are aimed at youngsters 10 and older.

For older girls: "This Precious Year" by Borghild Dahl. It is the story of a farm girl attending college in the Dakotas during a drought and depression year. There is the fun of collegiate life. But there is also the courage and faith required to press ahead for an education in the face of hard times. Published by E. P. Dutton and Co., and sells for $3.25.

A Styron-Like Novel Produced By New Name Among Writers

By DON KEOWN

There seems to us to be something akin to the writing of the immensely-gifted William Styron in the feeling for and command of language demonstrated by Robert Cairns in his novel, "The Two O'Clock Sun."

Like Styron, Cairns has an extraordinary ability for expression. He can reach out for just the proper word or phrase, and he can weave those words and phrases together into a web of remarkable strength and brilliancy.

Which is not to say that "The Two O'Clock Sun" is the equal of a Styron novel. It is not.

"The Two O'Clock Sun" is the story of visionary Harlow Wilson, who is driven by his belief that world hopes are dependent upon the substitution of government by enlightened men for government by faulty political systems. In the seething cauldron of Beirut, Lebanon, Wilson sets up his own laboratory, using Arab youths as his "guinea pigs," to launch his grand experiment, all the time bedeviled by the gravest of personal doubts.

The story is told by Martin Clayne, a younger fellow-journalist who has fallen under Wilson's influence as a co-worker for Radio Free Europe in Munich, and who follows him to Beirut.

Cairns was himself at one time an editor on an English-language newspaper in Beirut even as Wilson and Clayne are in his story. Thus he knows his setting intimately, and passes along that knowledge in rich detail. His description is not limited to the geographical, but includes the people, their culture and their politics as well.

The major weakness of the story lies in the central character of Harlow Wilson. His motivating belief is too thin, too naive to justify the attention focussed upon it. It is not presented with sufficient conviction and depth to justify the importance attached to it. And, largely as a result, Wilson emerges as something less than the fascinating and charming idealist which Cairns needs as his central character. It is difficult to accept Wilson's influence over Clayne, or over his young Arabian proteges. The surprise is not that Wilson fails, but that he has made any headway whatsoever in his seemingly hopeless project.

Geographically, the novel is strong. Rhetorically, the writing is superb. But there is a thinness in the plot which is difficult for the reader to accept. And the most important of Cairns' characters is not the best presented. Still, "The Two O'Clock Sun" is a commendable effort for a first novel and establishes Cairns as a man to be watched—a potential major literary figure.

THE TWO O'CLOCK SUN by Robert Cairns, Random House, 312 pages, $4.95.

BEST SPORTS STORIES 1964 edited by Irving T. Marsh and Edward Ehre, E. P. Dutton & Co., 336 pages, $4.95.

FOR THE 20th straight year, E. P. Dutton & Co. has published a collection of what a panel of experts considers to be the best newspaper and magazine sportswriting of the previous year.

"Best Sports Stories 1964" strikes us as a degree shy of the standard of excellence observed the preceding year. It is, nevertheless, a treat for the sports buff.

There are 49 stories in all, dealing with virtually all the sports. Three are singled out for awards, and of these an account by Robert Lipsyte of the New York Times of the drab life of a minor league baseball player is outstanding. "Major league baseball players are not gods. They're just men in kids' uniforms," is only one of the many hard discoveries of the young athlete.

George Leonard of the Nashville Banner and Gilbert Rogin of Sports Illustrated magazine are the other award-winners, but we were greatly impressed by Leonard Sheeter's deeply dimensional portrait of professional boxer Rubin Carter, again from Sports Illustrated.

It is noteworthy that the really exceptional writing is generally by those reporters and columnists who have adopted a realistic attitude toward the games they cover. They do not confuse the competition on the playing fields with the kind of heroism being displayed by our fighting men in Southeast Asia, or by the kids who are risking their very lives for the cause of civil rights in the Deep South. In other words, they write with a sense of perspective. Sportswriting has grown up as a profession in the past decade or so, just as many — but not all — fans have come to take a more adult attitude toward our pastimes without diminishing their enjoyment.

Set in the Pennsylvania Dutch country, "The Grave-Maker's House" by Rubin Weber is an extremely effective piece of suspense writing.

Weber succeeds in establishing and maintaining a brooding air of fear and evil that is all the more remarkable in that this is his first novel. .

Old Jonas is dead, and there is good reason to suspect the loutish, dangerous cemetery sexton, Phares Zercher, of having murdered him. But only school teacher Galen Herr has the courage to ask questions. And in so doing, he puts himself and his family in jeopardy.

You will want to read this one straight-through. It's the kind of book that simply cannot be set aside until it is completed.

On The Stereo Scene

Some new records on the Decca label:

PAGANINI: Concerto No. 5 in A for Violin and Orchestra — Franco Gulli, violin/Orchestra de Camera dell'Angelicum/ Luciano Rosada; plus PAGANINI: I Palpiti; Cantabile in D Major, Franco Guilli, violin/ Enrica Cavallo, piano — Decca Stereo DL 710081:

Premiere recording of a newly discovered Paganini concerto. Attractive, but not nearly as interesting as the other concerti by the virtuoso of the violin. Display for display's sake is evident, especially in the sections for violin alone. The two short encore pieces for violin and piano are better forgotten altogether.

IT WAS A LOVER and His Lass — Music of Shakespeare's Time — The New York Pro Musica directed by Noah Greenberg — Decca DL 9421:

The Pro Musica, a group that has done more than any other in the U.S. to arouse a growing interest in early music, always finds unique and charming ideas for its album. In this Shakespeare year, what could be more suitable than a collection of vocal and instrumental from the time of The Bard? William Byrd and John Dowland will be familiar to many. James Tyler is soloist in the melancholy lute music by the latter. The "title tune" comes from a book of airs composed by the Elizabethan playwright, Thomas Morley. Other rarely-heard works in the album are by Weelkes, East, Hume, Bartlett, and Wilbye. The words of the vocal selections are printed as part of the strikingly-designed album. Fine sound in mono. A worthwhile addition to the over one dozen albums under the Pro Musica banner.

LISZT: Concerto No. 1 and SAINT-SAENS: Concerto No. 2 — Ruth Slenczynska, piano, with (1) Orchestra of Vienna/Carl Melles; (2) Symphony of the Air/Henry Swoboda — Decca Stereo DL 710084:

Forget the Liszt. This clunker would be superfluous even in a good recording, but this one is quite bad both in the orchestral accompaniment and in the stereo sound.

The Saint-Saens is a different matter entirely. Miss Slenczynska's glistening performance makes an even match for Rubenstein on RCA Victor.

LOOK UP THERE

Flags are flying today—
The wind is playing with banners.
All kinds of flags merry and gay
Flying in different manners.

Fluttering and swaying
They fold and unfold,
Clinging to poles they rest
And then a thrust forward
Quite sudden and bold
Putting the wind to a test.

Flags on tall building look pretty
Reaching high up in the sky;
They are the hands of a city
Waving hello and goodbye.

NEED A QUIET, comfortable spot in your home for writing letters, paying bills, addressing cards? Why not try the living room? This attractive desk installation is perfect for job, also separates entryway from living room and forms back for built-in banquette. It is designed in champagne colored West Coast hemlock to match wall paneling.

How Much Use Do You Get From Your Living Room?

What's a living room?

In your house, is it a formal parlor where you entertain the boss and the preacher? Truthfully, is it just wasted space so far as your daily life is concerned?

If the living room is not a real living area, the fault is probably due to its design. Perhaps it's only a cube with furniture in it — a sitting room in a home owned by people who rarely just sit.

NO ONE can afford that much waste space in a home, least of all the average, active American family.

To reclaim that room and make it an inviting, useful area, add a few working built-ins and watch the parlor spring to life.

For instance, a handsome built-in desk with complementary cabinets for paper storage creates a writing room where you can address cards, catch up on your correspondence, pay the bills, or make up a table seating arrangement for the club dinner — all in the quiet elegance supplied by your lovely living room.

THE DESK unit can be built against any wall or as a divider to mark off two areas within the room. With this last treatment, you can create an entrance hall if you don't already have one, or delineate a game area or reading nook.

Another attractive idea — when designing the desk unit as a divider — is to build a banquette on the side facing the main seating area of the living room, and perhaps continue it along the adjoining wall. The banquette seat consists of a ledge which is supported on a base recessed from the seat's edge so that heels can be tucked back.

Upholstered foam cushions, tailored to fit the seat, make this banquette as comfortable as it is attractive. Bolsters are used for the backrest.

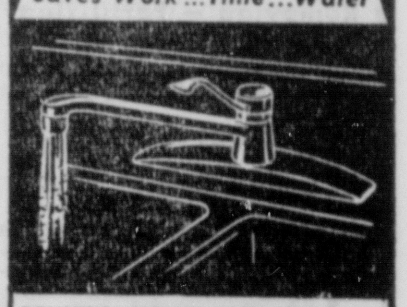

THE DESK unit and banquette can be built of hemlock using tongue-and-groove panels and finishing the hemlock to suit your personal taste. Most people prefer to capture the natural beauty of this wood's delicate grain and coloring, and use a clear lacquer, varnish or one of the new clear plastics which looks like a rubbed oil finish.

Built-in cabinetry and shelving can reclaim the living room for many other purposes, as well. It could become a game room, a library, or — if the youngsters have usurped the family room for their boisterous activities — how about putting the music equipment and a television set into a living room wall to make an adults' entertainment center.

A PLAYHOUSE for the children is never more appreciated by the youngsters — or by mother, too, for that matter — than during the summer vacation months. It provides the tots with a place in which to play house, store, etc. The Easi-Bild pattern offered here includes step-by-step directions for the construction of the playhouse pictured above — without special tools or skill. Materials are specified, pattern is full-size, and there is even a color guide for the painting. The structure measures nearly four feet square and five feet high, and is light and airy. Send $1 to Independent-Journal, P.O. Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, New York 10510, and ask for Playhouse Pattern No. 148.

SOME CONIFERS THAT RESPOND TO BONSAI

For enjoyment throughout the entire year, coniferous (cone-bearing) evergreens are without competition. Your nurseryman has conifers to fit every landscape situation. He especially advises the bonsai forms of dwarfing conifers.

A bonsai form is one which has been asymetrically pruned and trimmed on top and bottom . . . in other words, your nurseryman has used his skill to trim the roots and branches to insure you of a perfectly-formed miniature of any conifer.

BONSAI FORMS are perfect for container growing, smaller gardening areas, or rock gardens. Containing the root growth after trimming keeps the conifers in perfect miniature form. When contained in a pot, the roots are trimmed and the plant is a true bonsai; "bonsai" in Japanese means "to plant in a pot."

Let your artistic intuition go rampant! Design groups of the bonsai forms amid rock or sea shell arrangements, around sunken garden pools or succulent arrangements, or near or on the patio for an eye-pleaser during those outdoor hours.

AN IMPORTANT fact is that there is no limit to the varieties which can use the bonsai method. Your nurseryman has a complete selection of the bonsai forms and will be more than happy to advise you as to what types are best suited to your particular plans. You will be able to enjoy the majestic and care-free bonsai style conifers anywhere.

Some of the conifers which so readily respond to the bonsai method are the Junipers particularly Hollywood Juniper, Juniper Prostrate and Juniper Procumbens types. Each has its own special charm. The Hollywood is one of the most willing trees to grow.

One of the most popular trees in the bonsai form, as well as in its natural height of four feet, is the Mugho Pine. Deep, dark green foliage will add a dramatic touch to any area. Mugho Pine does unbelievably well in container growing. You would think that nature planned for you to keep this tree in the miniature form.

BONSAI FORMS of the pines are suited for everyone whether in small gardens or on sentry duty on the front porch in tubs. Monterey Pine is the most common showpiece in bonsai form, but many others are available and well suited for your individual plans.

The Deodar Cedar, one of the longtime favorites in California, is a speedy grower which averages about three feet a year up to 80 feet in height (if not in the boisai form). However, its graceful, evenly spaced, light green, needled branches make it a visual delight in any season in the small bonsai shape.

Yews, another of the bonsai choices, are noted for the dark, dark green of their needles. They are most adaptable and hardy, even in shady conditions. Bonsai-style Yews are especially stunning in a glass-in patio area or family room. They add a "conversation" touch in the living room, too!

Try this new experience in tree forms. Your nursery will have the full selection of bonsai-style conifers and the special variety just suited for your individual landscaping, land area, and interior decor.

Try The 'Sweet Olive'

The Osmanthus ("sweet olive" or "holly olive") takes a more subtle approach. Its flowers lure insects, and humans, with deliciously fragrant bloom.

THE OSMANTHUS belong to the olive family, but the only resemblance is in the tiny fruits. The foliage is entirely different, and in most varieties looks like holly. The foliage has good substance and the leaf margins are toothed, sometimes spiny.

With the exception of the Delavay form, which grows low and sweeping, the better known garden varieties are stiff and upright, making good subjects for hedges and individual specimens.

The holly-leaf variety is slow-growing and is generally available at your nursery with dark glossy green or golden-variegated foliage. It is useful as an accent plant in a tight situation, or set them about two feet apart from one-gallon containers for a good permanent hedge from three to six feet tall.

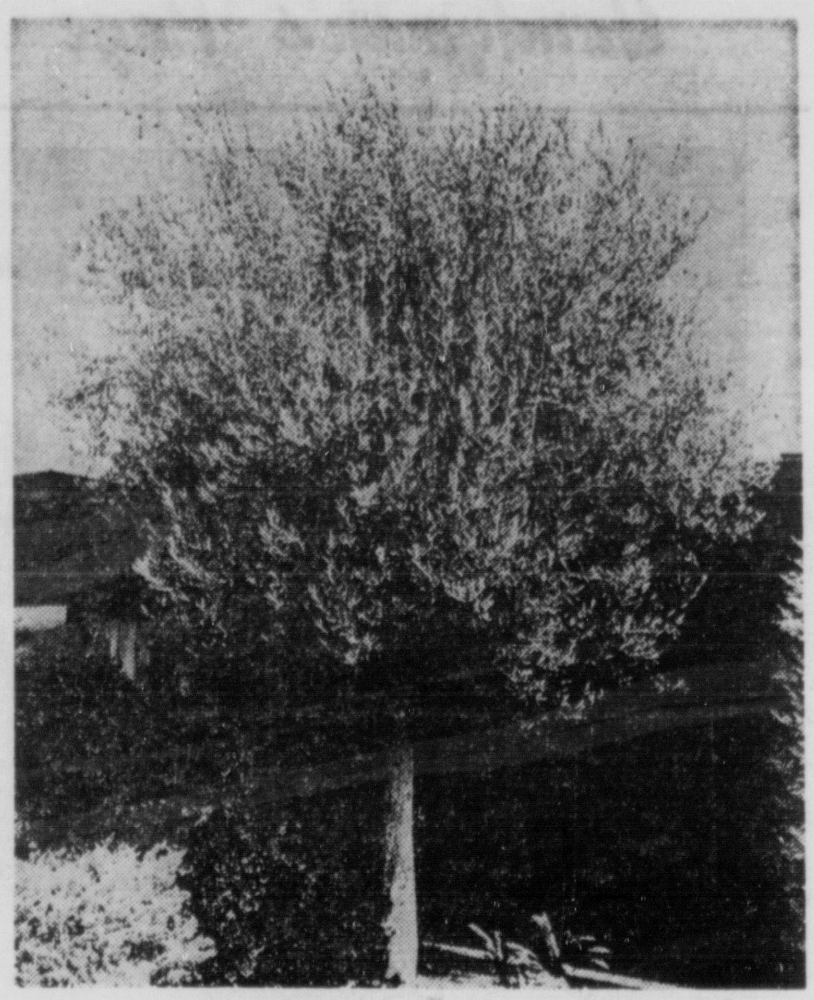

ANOTHER LEAF form is found in the San Jose hybrid of Osmanthus fortunei. While still resembling the holly, it is bolder in size and pattern than the holly-leaf variety. It grows faster and will grow taller, for a hedge in the eight to 10-foot class.

Both kinds bear fragrant flowers in fall.

For a softer-textured foliage and a little more open habit of growth, ask your nurseryman to show you the sweet olive. The growth is upright and moderately rapid. It is easily trimmed to adapt its form to many garden situations. Its fragrance is considered to be nicest of all — and that is a tribute in the fragrantly competitive Osmanthus group.

ALL VARIETIES and the majestic olive tree may be grown in sun or shade and in a wide range of soil conditions. They all are hardy in our area.

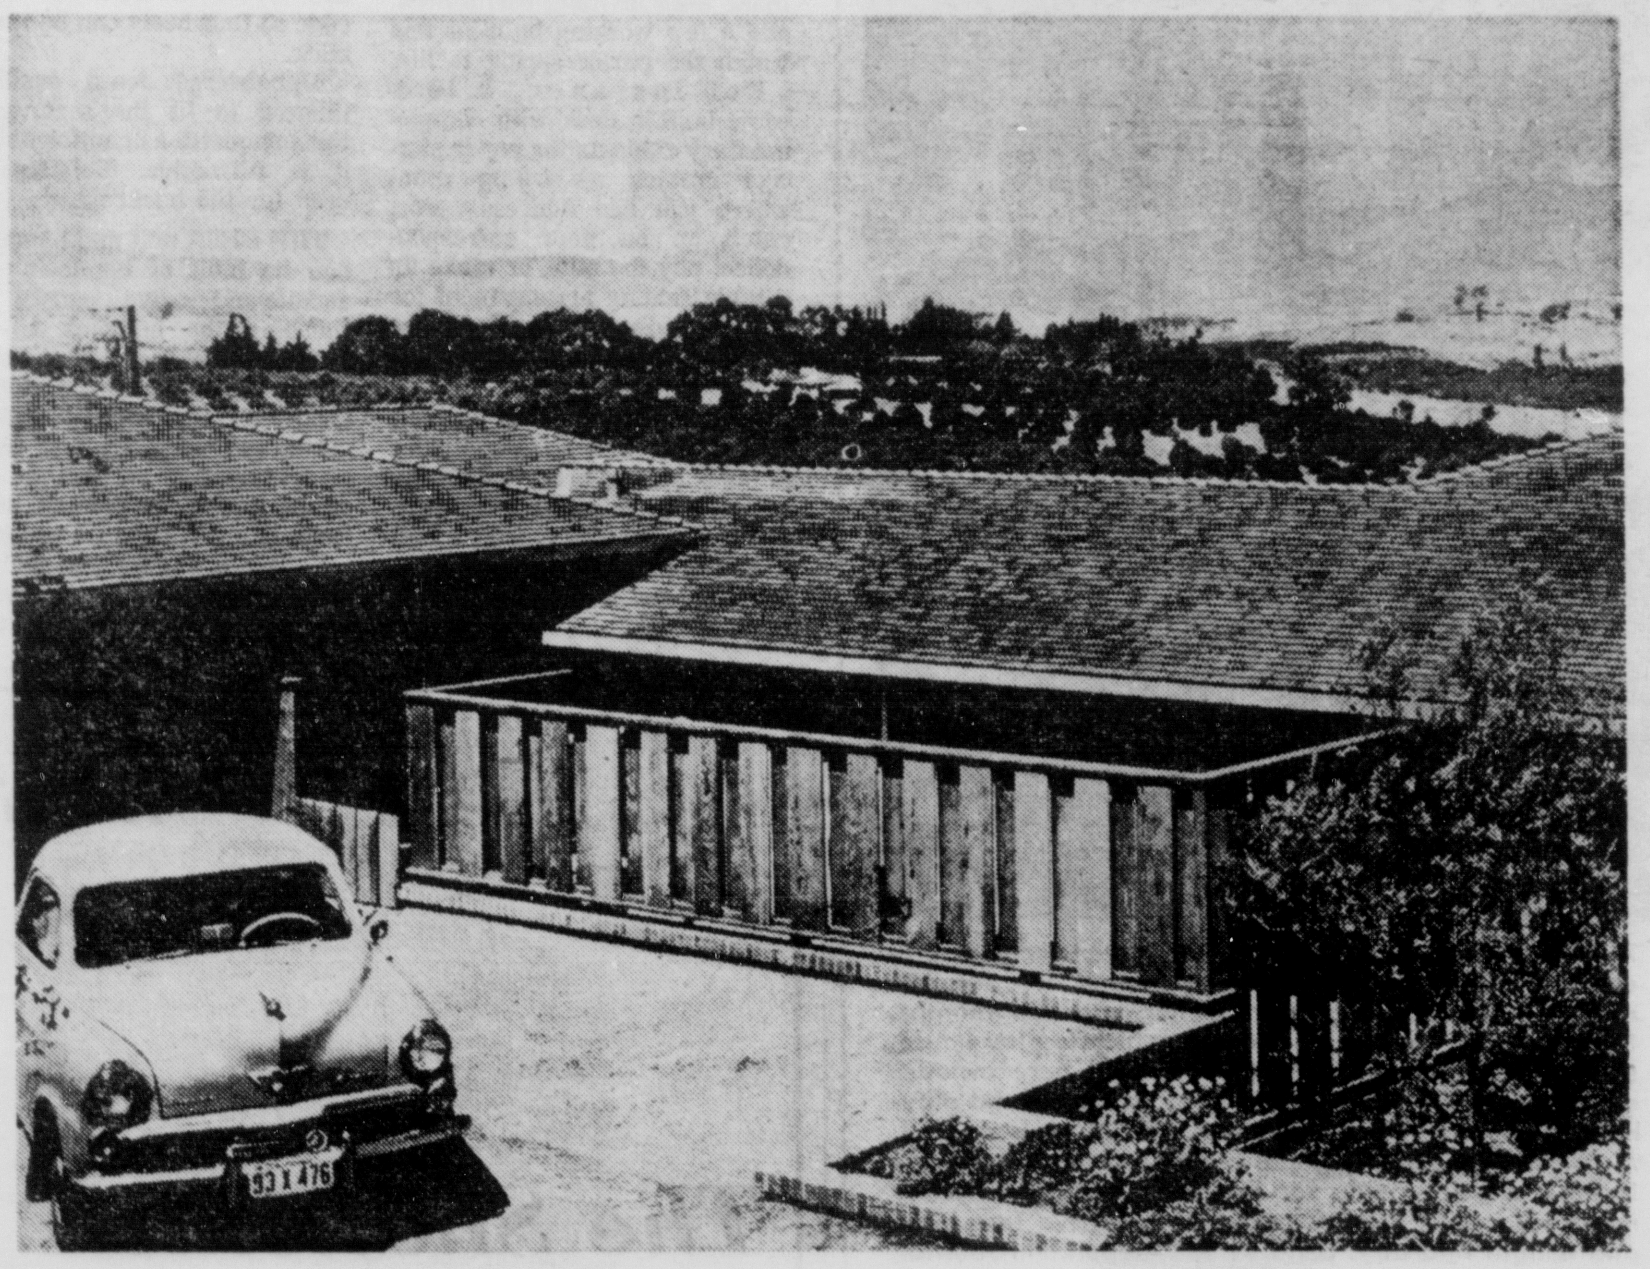

Botannically speaking, the above are: Sweet Olive (Osmanthus fragrans) and Olive Tree (Olea suropaea); O. fortunei is a hybrid between O. fragrens and O. licifolius.

THE OLIVE TREE has been a delight to peoples of every era. Dating back to Biblical times, this tree has been admired for its delicate leaves and shape. But it is just as modern as your yard. Check with your nursery for an olive ready for planting. (Photo by California Assn. of Nurserymen)

Imports That Like Our Clime

Two features every home owner desires in his garden, freedom from winds and privacy, are ably provided by a group of friendly natives from New Zealand, Australia and the Orient.

They are well known in Marin as the Pittosporums (pitch-seed).

Whether you ask for them by accenting the first syllable or the second, makes no difference. Your nurseryman will know exactly what you want, as well as your problem.

THE THREE New Zealanders grow bushy-upright in a hurry and provide a nice selection of foliage colors. Your nurseryman will introduce them to you by their Maori names: Tawhiwhi Pittosporum has black stems, small dark green foliage and dark purplish flowers fragrant at night; Tarata has medium-sized foliage, light green with wavy margins, yellowish fragrant flowers and Karo provides a grey-green appearance because the undersides of the leaves are like white felt.

The tiny flowers are reddish.

The Australian variety is known there as Victorian Box, which is difficult to understand because the foliage is fairly large and the growth rather open, quite the reverse of boxwood.

IT IS USED in two ways. Anyone who has driven through the Santa Barbara suburb of Montecito will recognize it as the tall estate hedge providing privacy from the road. It is also trained in the "standard" tree form and used where formal, small trees are required.

The Oriental variety is the Tobira, a modest, hardy medium-sized plant that grows into a large mound naturally. The terminal foliage is arranged in a rosette, the leaves recurved at the margin and lemon-scented. White, fragrant flowers turn into greenish seed capsules that split open in fall to reveal red seeds. Easily pruned into a three to four foot hedge,

YOUR SWIMMING pool will look natural to the backyard if it is incorporated into a garden setting. Douglas fir decking around pool relates to plant materials. Benches built into railing are a useful addition. Simple screen of spaced one-by-two's, with plastic shadow panels, makes an attractive backdrop.

The Pool Needs landscaping

Some people long for a swimming pool, but once it's installed in the back yard, feel vaguely dissatisfied.

What's the cause of this frequent disenchantment?

Landscape architects who have dealt with the problem have found that, in most cases, it's the matter of appearance. Too often, people call up a pool firm and have them take over without first having given thought to the enormous changes created by a pool. The result is little more than an oversize tub sunk into the back lawn.

It's great for getting wet — but hardly qualifies as a yard beautification project.

IT'S NO GREAT trick to make a pool rate tops as a yard beautifier. The main thing is to plan for it and to incorporate it into the landscaping with structures and plant materials.

For instance, addition of a pool will immediately define a lounging and outdoor living area. Summer entertaining, as well as family fun, will quite naturally center at pool side.

So, why not make this the living part of the garden?

One way the project can begin is by building a wood deck on one or more sides of the pool. Decks are not difficult to build and can be handled by most amateur carpenters.

DOUGLAS FIR lumber is excellent for both framing members and deck boards, and deck boards can range in size from two-by-four to two-by-eight, depending on desired appearance factors.

Smart homeowners will let the pool deck weather out naturally, for water splashes can cause uneven coloration on a stained or painted deck.

If the pool is removed from shade, it's also smart to add a trellis roof to protect over enthusiastic youngsters and watching adults from too much sunshine.

Liability laws being what they are, it's also plenty smart to fence the pool area. But here, again use landscaping art.

A TALL, vertical slat fence of spaced cedar one-by-ones make an excellent barrier and can't be climbed. It can be enhanced by adding planting beds along the base and by incorporating shadow panels into the design. The shadow panels are window-like panels of translucent plastic, colored or white, set into the fence.

When enclosing the pool, it's a good idea to fence in as much of the yard as possible to avoid creating a pool area separate from the rest of the garden. In this manner, you retain the pool as a natural element of the overall scheme.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

- When it comes to plant material, the very best is the least expensive in the long run. Don't spend time, effort and material growing plants of poor quality. Check with your nurseryman.
- Now is the time to plant all types of container grown trees and shrubs.
- This is also a good time to plant and divide the Bearded Iris.
- Take a few seconds to cut back your summer-blooming perennials after they have bloomed. Be sure to leave some foliage at the base of the plant.
- Pick faded blooms off all your favorite plants. This will encourage additional flowers to bloom and conserves the strength of your plant.
- Don't overlook your hydrangeas as a source of indoor cut bouquets. Before placing them in their vase, plunge their stems into hot water. They'll last longer.

Meet Miss Nancy

To Morinites, She's Also Mrs. Townsley

MISS Nancy Besst of KTVU-TV's popular show for the tots, "Romper Room," is Mrs. Pat Townsley of San Rafael, away from the television cameras. Her maltese terrier "Romper," whom she admits is "the most pampered dog in the world," frequently appears on TV with her as a guest.
(Photo by Tom King)

Miss Nancy is a diplomat with a "Do Bee" chalkboard, a "mommy" with six children who change every two weeks, and a teacher who would have to hold daily sessions in the Rose Bowl to accommodate all her little students in one "classroom."

"Miss Nancy" is Nancy Besst, mistress of KTVU-TV's "Romper Room," seen Monday through Friday, 11 a.m. to 12. It's a television "kindergarten" which shows pre-schoolers the way to good manners, creative learning, good health and cleanliness.

And, away from the TV studios, she becomes Mrs. Pat Townsley of San Rafael, wife of a Hamilton Air Force Base jet pilot, and owner of "Romper," a white Maltese terrier that she confesses is "the world's most pampered dog."

Romper frequently joins Miss Nancy as a guest on her television show. And off-TV, she is Mrs. Townsley's constant companion.

ALWAYS ON the lookout for new ideas to benefit youngsters, Nancy has initiated or has been active in many community and personal projects directed toward helping the children of the Bay Area. These include annual Red Cross safety and swimming campaigns, fire prevention drives and the Marine Reserve "Toys for Tots" collection of Christmas gifts for the underprivileged.

Romper Room studio guests, three boys and three girls, attend the televised class for a two-week period and then go through graduation ceremonies.

"This is the saddest moment on the program for me," Nancy admits, "because I can't help forming an attachment for each child."

NANCY IS well prepared to cope with the challenges of being both mother and teacher to thousands of children. Originally from Canton, Ohio, she graduated from Northwestern University with a Bachelor of Sciences Degree in radio and television. She joined the "Romper Room" organization in 1956.

The show is directed from Baltimore by originator Bert Claster, with program material being sent to the 100 "Romper Room" cities in the United States, Japan, Puerto Rico and Canada.

Nancy was a staff teacher in Baltimore and then became a relief hostess, flying to whatever city needed a temporary replacement for its teacher because of illness, accident, vacation or marriage.

UNEXPECTED and often hilarious things happen on any live children's show — but especially on "Romper Room," where the tots are still in the age of awesome honesty.

Once Miss Nancy asked one of the children to taste a sponsor's "delightful" drink.

"Awful," said the little boy, wiping his mouth.

Another time she demonstrated a medicinal spray for scratches and burns. She pushed the button; the spray didn't come out the way she thought it should, and she kept right on pushing.

ON ONE OF the regularly programmed imaginary gallops, she led the children around the set to a "service station," and made the mistake of asking what they saw. "A rest room," shouted a pony-tailed "traveler."

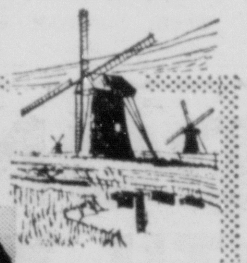

But it's not always the boys and girls who liven up the show with the unexpected.

Once Nancy borrowed a myna bird to show the children. It said, "Hello, Joe" and "How are you?"

But when she asked for one last word for the boys and girls . . . "One martini, please."

VETERAN entertainer Rudy Vallee will help give younger hopefuls a break when he presides over the new "On Broadway Tonight" summer series, debuting Wednesday at 10 p.m. on KPIX-TV. The program is designed as a showcase for promising young professionals.

A Repeat Visit To A Castle

KPIX To Show San Simeon Tour 2nd Time

The fabulous Hearst Castle—until recently one of the world's magnificent mysteries—will be featured in the San Francisco Pageant repeat presentation of "The Enchanted Hill—The Story of San Simeon" Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. on KPIX-TV (Channel 5).

Rare motion pictures, unusual still photographs and present-day film have been combined to give viewers insight into builder William Randolph Hearst, and a close look into his spectacular home on the coast of California.

The program is narrated by Steve Allen with personal reminiscences by silent screen star Francis X. Bushman; William Randolph Hearst. Jr.; Carey Baldwin, director of San Francisco's Fleishhacker Zoo; and others.

THE FILM recalls the acquisition of the land in the Santa Lucia mountains by Sen. George Hearst, the family's camping trips to the area, and the tour that opened young William Randolph Hearst's eyes to the art treasures of the world — many of which ultimately found a new home in his castle.

Channel 5 viewers will see Julia Morgan's original sketches of San Simeon, the construction of the home, the private zoo maintained by Hearst and the estate in its final form.

Many of the celebrities of the 1920s and '30s — among them Charlie Chaplin—will be pictured.

FINALLY, A complete tour of the castle as it is today will be presented.

"The Enchanted Hill — The Story of San Simeon" was originally aired Jan. 2, 1963.

The program was photographed by Dick Williams and edited by Robert Pusey, Jr. Ray Hubbard was the executive producer.
